UIC ACCOUNT ALMOST EMPTY

OTTAWA (CP) — The unemployment insurance account trickled nearer empty Monday while Liberals and Conservatives haggled in the Commons over a bill that would again fill it with needed funds.

The government has said the account will run dry Wednesday unless Parliament passes a bill to remove the $800-million ceiling on the amount the government is allowed to lend the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC).

The government bailed out the fund in August — after dissolution of the last House — by issuing governor-general's warrants. The UIC is again running out of money and the only way to save the situation, the government says, is to lift the ceiling.

The Conservatives attempted Monday to push through three amendments that would have limited loans to $900 million.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, and later Deputy Speaker Robert McCleave, swept the proposed amendments aside with lengthy decisions.

The House finally settled into a debate Monday evening on a motion to have the bill read a third time and passed.

B.C. Jobless Near 10%

Times News Services

OTTAWA—Unemployment in British Columbia jumped to 95,000 in January — almost 10 per cent of the total work force and 16,000 more than a year ago — Statistics Canada reported today.

The national unemployment total last month was 688,000 — 7.7 per cent of the country's work force — up from 665,000 a year ago. January's percentage of unemployed was the highest since March of 1961.

The size of the labor force remained high and the number of persons working also showed a drop that was less than the usual size between December and its pre-Christmas activity and January, the figures show.

The labor force — those listed as eligible for work — was 8,881,000, compared with 8,929,000 in December and 8,582,000 in January of last year.

There were 8,193,000 persons working compared with 8,345,000 in December and 7,917,000 in January of 1972.

The participation rate, the percentage of the civilian population listed as members of the work force, also continued to run high.

British Columbia, at 9.9 per cent, was second only to the Atlantic region and Quebec is jobless totals.

Despite the fact January's unemployment level was the highest in almost 12 years, Ottawa considered today's report good news.

January is always a cruel month for job-seekers in Canada and Statistics Canada says that taking historical seasonal fluctuations into account, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 6.2 per cent in January, from 6.7 per cent a month earlier.

B.C. Premier Dave Barrett said this morning he wants to review figures in his office, and may comment on the jobless picture in this province later.

As far as the long-term trend is concerned even a drop of .2 per cent in the seasonally-adjusted figure is considered significant, so the decline of .5 per cent in January was good news for the government.

Nevertheless, in absolute terms the figure of 688,000 persons out of work was close to the all-time high set in February, 1961, and unless there is some dramatic turn-around this month that 1961 record likely will be broken.

All regions of the country showed an increase in the number of unemployed between the two months, but only the Atlantic provinces took a turn for the worse when seasonal fluctuations were taken into account.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate rose from 9.4 per cent to 9.5 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, while dropping from 8.6 per cent to 8.4 per cent in Quebec, from 5.0 to 4.2 per cent in Ontario, from 5.1 to 4.7 per cent on the Prairies, and from 8.4 per cent to 8.0 per cent in British Columbia.

The actual number of unemployed increased from 67,000 to 87,000 in the Atlantic provinces, from 206,000 to 247,000 in Quebec, from 153,000 to 170,000 in Ontario, and from 79,000 to 89,000 in the Prairies.

Bonn Props Dollar

Times News Service

BONN — West Germany's central bank bought a record $1.5 billion today in a desperate emergency attempt to bolster the U.S. dollar being driven downward in money marts throughout Europe.

Chancellor Willy Brandt's government rejected American advice to meet the attack by letting the German mark rise in price.

Instead, the government instructed the central bank to defend the dollar at all costs to halt the panicky run.

At the end of today's trading by dealers on the crowded floor of the Frankfurt exchange, the dollar closed at a rate of 3.1515 marks. This was 2.21 per cent off the official median rate, and several notches below Monday's closing.

In other European financial capitals, the dollar continued to lose ground. In London and Zurich, a massive transfer from currency investment into gold pushed up the free-market gold price to within a few cents of its all-time high.

The big London bullion dealers pegged gold in the morning at $68.90 an ounce — $1.30 higher than the Monday rate.

This is nearly twice the official price of gold before the U.S. abandoned dollar convertibility into gold in August, 1971.

Even at today's figure, there were plenty of buyers around, dealers reported, and some deals were being made in London at $69.35 an ounce.

Board Appeals For Parent Help

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today failure to reach a settlement in the 25-day-old Greater Victoria school maintenance workers strike means the board will have to look ahead and "endeavor to extend school openings," with the help of parents.

The strike by 268 members of local 382, Canadian Union of Public Employees, is deadlocked today after the union rejected a mediation officer's recommendations, which was accepted by the school board.
(See story page 17)

"It's up to parents. If they are interested in helping clean schools and keeping them up to standard then we will endeavor to continue education as normally as possible," Bunn said.

The board had previously expressed a desire to stay neutral on the question of parents coming in to clean schools.

Asked if this was a reversal and the board now intended to organize clean-up crews, Bunn said:

'SELF-GENERATING'

"This must be a self-generating thing. But the board will make every effort to make possible parental action."

Board officials met today with Education Minister Eileen Dailly to ask for an order-in-council which would give them a legal right to open schools for two hours a day.

Schools have been operating in this way during the strike but only with the verbal support of the department of education, not legal permission.

Bunn said the board will ask for the approval with the condition that school hours may be extended "by the superintendent provided heating and cleanliness is maintained."

MODERATELY CLEAN

"We see this as being on a school to school basis," Bunn said.

"If the plant is functioning satisfactorily, if they have automatic heating and it's moderately clean, the superintendent will tell principals the school can stay open."

Bunn agreed that the board was seeking to make its position legal in order that

PARALYSED BOY AWARDED $4M

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than $4 million has been awarded a paralysed and mute 13-year-old boy, Kelly Niles of San Rafael, in what his lawyer calls the largest personal injury verdict ever granted one person in United States history.

Defendants were Mt. Zion Hospital in San Francisco, pediatrician Dr. David Haskin, the City of San Rafael and San Rafael school district.

Niles suffered a fractured skull and internal bleeding in a fight during a school baseball game June 26, 1970. Witnesses reported Haskin examined the youngster at Mt. Zion, then sent him home. When his condition worsened his father returned the boy to the hospital and he underwent surgery.

Doctors testified that the boy would have made a full recovery had he been treated immediately.

Strike Called In Ulster

BELFAST (Reuter) — Protestants have called a one-day strike in Northern Ireland over the detention without trial of two men arrested after a grenade attack on a Catholic workmen's bus last week.

Spokesman said after a meeting of several Protestant paramilitary organizations Monday night that thousands of supporters will stay off work Wednesday and their children will not go to school.

"The next 48 hours will show who runs the province," a source close to the Protestant militants said.

The two men in custody, arrested after a Catholic workman was killed in the grenade attack last week, are thought to be the first Protestants detained without trial on suspicion of terrorist activities.

A British solider was slightly injured Monday night by a bomb thrown at a patrol from the top of an apartment building in the Catholic Lower Falls area of Belfast.

Other bombs badly damaged a real estate office in the city centre and an automobile works in Antrim, west of Belfast.

Beatings Halt Talk

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of five elevator companies broke off talks Monday with the International Union of Elevator Constructors after three supervisors were beaten in Hamilton.

An industry spokesman said James Stephen, 33, of West Hill, Ont., was beaten by three men Monday while working in the elevator machine room at a Hamilton apartment project.

Stephen, employed by Armor Elevator Canada Ltd., was treated in hospital and released.

Two members of the supervisory staff of Otis Elevator Ltd. were beaten later by seven persons at a parking lot in the city's east section.

The spokesman identified the two men as John Nagy and Harry Johnston. Nagy, 32, was treated in hospital and released. Johnston did not go to hospital.

PoW Release 'About Saturday'

Times News Services

The first groups of U.S. prisoners of war to be freed in both North and South Vietnam will be handed over about Saturday, Michel Gauvin, chairman of the International Commission of Control and Supervision said today.

"There are no definite dates, but I understand the American prisoners will probably be released around the 10th of February — some of them, not all, from Hanoi," Gauvin told reporters following a meeting of the ICCS.

Four United States Navy minesweepers were ordered today to begin clearing an anchorage 35 miles off Haiphong harbor to serve as a base of operations for later sweeping of mines from North Vietnamese ports.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Progressive Conservative and NDP groups are insisting the government's resolution approving Canada's role in supervising the Vietnam peace be brought back into the Commons for a vote.

The Liberal minority government, embarrassed by the two amendments introduced by the Conservatives and NDP, is ducking the request.

NDP Leader David Lewis said Monday in an interview he wants the government to bring the resolution back into the House this week for a vote.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield is also insisting the government resolution be brought before the House again so that the Commons can vote on it. G. W. Baldwin, Conservative House Leader, asked Government House Leader Allan MacEachen in the House Monday when it would be submitted to the House for a vote.

MacEachen sidestepped the question. He said the government would consider bringing it before the House if the Commons finished the other business scheduled to be dealt with by the MPs.

Old bottles is their idea of treasure.

"We haven't been collectors for very long, but we both got interested in the weird kinds of bottles we kept on finding in out of the way places," Rod, 15, explained.

NO TRUCE OBSERVED

HAI LANG, Vietnam (AP) — A team of the international peacekeeping force headed for their first day in the field today, but an artillery duel prevented them from getting into Quang Tri City. (See also Page 31.)

Eight officers of the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS) stopped five miles short of the devastated capital of South Vietnam's northernmost province. They were on a one-day trip north from their new regional headquarters at Hue.

North Vietnamese 130-millimetre shells raised towering clouds of black smoke near South Vietnamese airborne units west of Highway One and the government troops answerved with their 105 millimetre guns. No shells have fallen in Quang Tri City itself for several days.

"We are only on a reconnaissance mission and we are not here to observe artillery fire," Col. William MacLeod of Canada told disappointed South Vietnamese officers who had prepared a welcome for the truce observers in Quang Tri.

"But don't worry," he added. "We'll be back."

MacLeod said he was under orders not to subject his team to any danger.

"What do we have to prove anyway?" MacLeod asked.

Mortgage Crackdown Call

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The B.C. government was urged Monday to crack down hard and soon on the "outright crooks" among the province's mortgage brokers.

Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) told the legislature hundreds of poor people are being "gypped" by brokers who charge excessively high interest rates and bonuses, disguise the true cost of borrowing and in some cases use misleading advertising.

"This is one huge rip-off by people who are on the verge of being crooks," he said.

Brousson called on the government to enforce provisions of the Mortgage Brokers Act passed two years ago, proclaim the section of the act requiring full disclosure of the true cost of borrowing before an agreement is binding, and generally amend and update the legislation to make it "tougher."

He gave details of specific mortgages arranged by several companies, including Westview Properties Ltd., Modern Finance Ltd., General Securities Ltd., Trinity Properties Ltd. and Link Developments Ltd.

In one instance the bonus or commission earned by the company was as high as 50 per cent of the actual loan, he said.

In another, the interest rate on loan repayments was so high — 24 per cent — that at the end of the five-year loan period the borrower still owed as much as he did at the outset.

Brousson said many people are apparently "given the impression" that the bonus shown on the agreement is the amount of interest on the loan, whereas that sum is added to the principal and interest charged on the whole amount.

He described the experience of one couple with a $25,000 home who arranged a $6,000 second mortgage on their return from Hong Kong a year ago.

Legal fees amounted to $200 and on the total of $6,200 the company charged a bonus of $1,700 or 29 per cent of the proceeds. Interest charged was set at 17 per cent with payments of $118 per month.

"Buried" down in the fine print of the agreement was a clause stipulating the entire sum still outstanding would become payable at the end of five years, Brousson said.

This meant that if the borrower kept up his time payments in five years he would have paid up about $7,080 but would still owe $7,300 of the $7,900 to which he had committed himself.

Brousson said as it was obvious that sooner or later the people concerned would lose their home through failure to

Council Delays Rec Plebiscite

Oak Bay council won't go ahead with a money bylaw for a recreation complex — or go to voters with a referendum — until it hears whether its application for a $767,000 federal loan has been approved.

The vote against going ahead was unanimous.

Ald. Douglas McLelland was first to speak against immediate action. He said he had talked to provincial officials who recommended that "the municipality not go too far down the bylaw trail until this (loan) application has been approved."

He said cutoff date for approval of winter works loans was mid-February.

"The decision could be coming before the end of the month or shortly afterward," he said.

He said if council received approval for the loan it could then "get down to the nuts and bolts."

Ald. John Goult supported McLelland when he said a letter should be sent today giving the council's position on the matter.

Goult said council was not in a position to judge whether a referendum should be held at this time.

Under the special loan program, council could go ahead with a money bylaw if it was a unanimous vote. Plans for the $1.6 million complex financing included the loan, plus $500,000 in federal winter works funds and $333,000 from the provincial government under its fund that provides one-third the cost of sports facilities costing up to $1 million.

Mayor Frances Elford said, "We did vote unanimously two weeks ago to apply for the loan."

Ald. Brian Smith said it was essential that the taxpayers be given all pertinent information, including the costs of construction, the proposed design of the complex and what sort of operating deficits could be expected.

Smith said there was no justification for not going to referendum to avoid the possibility of it being turned down.

"My sole object," he said, "is that we go forward and present all the facts."

He said it was decided not to go to referendum after this was done council would "avoid it (the referendum) with honor — not expediency."

Council agreed, on Smith's suggestion, that an information brochure be drawn up and circulated to every taxpayer.

A. B. Arnison, 942 Newport, reminded the council that they had been voted in by a referendum and said one should be held on the proposed centre.

He said Oak Bay could better spend federal and provincial grants on sewage treatment plants and "cleaning up our beaches."

Harry Gregson, 2160 Beach, said municipally-owned facilities invariably lost money and that Oak Bay should consider allowing a commercial facility to be built.

Council agreed that, once the information has been given taxpayers, a public meeting might be held at which all concerned residents could voice their opinions.

parents could not insist their children attend schools on a normal basis without the superintendent's permission.

If parents force their children to stay at a dirty or unheated school "they will be in an illegal position, not the board," Bunn explained.

Announcements on Wednesday's school openings will be made later today. After that the situation at schools may change daily.

FLOOD OF CALLS

The board's community relations officer Bill Stavdal said calls were "flooding" into his office this morning from parents wanting to clean schools.

He said the board was putting these people in touch with each other so they could make their own clean-up arrangements.

Principals from the district's 54 schools are meeting the adminstration this afternoon to discuss future school operations.

Cam Thompson, spokesman for a parents group which protested school closures in front of the legislature last week, says he's not sure what further protest action they will take.

'DESPERATE'

"We're desperate but I don't know what kind of effective action can be taken," Thompson said.

He said parent clean-up crews would have to be organized on an individual basis since many parents are union members themselves and would not want to jeopardize their union position by strike-breaking.

Meanwhile, at Rockheights elementary school, where protesting parents insisted their children stay in school all day Monday, principal Don McKinnon reports 36 students returned for afternoon classes.

All elementary schools have been open from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. for over a week.

McKinnon said the students who stayed the whole day were not given instruction but were supervised in their studies by their teachers.

"We can't go on with the curriculum when only a handful of students are there," he said.

Ottawa Gets Fire Prevention Grand Award

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa has been given a North American fire prevention grand award for 1972, the Boston-based National Fire Protection Association announced today.

Second in Canada behind Ottawa in the annual competition was Calgary. Entrants are judged on community efforts to reduce fires and educate the public in fire prevention practices.

THIS SENATOR WANTS BETTER PUBLIC IMAGE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate needs "a very good publicity committee with a top-notch man to look after it," a Quebec senator told the Senate Monday.

Senator Louis-Philippe Beaubien (PC Quebec) said the Senate's public image is being ruined by reporters who do not recognize the true talents and abilities of the Senate.

At the time he was complaining about reaction to the Senate passing in three days a 1971 government bill, C-259, to reform income tax procedures.

First suggested in a 1969 white paper, the bill was introduced in June, 1971, and passed in December, 1971. Along the way the subject had been dissected in the Commons and the Senate and in committee by representations from business and private individuals.

Many amendments proposed by the Senate were ignored by the Commons, Senator Beaubien said.

The Senate, he said, has done its best work during times of a minority government "because then the Senate has pushed around a little bit."

A recent article in the Wall Street Journal, he said, "made us look like ninnies. It said that we looked at Bill C-259 and passed it in three days."

"Let us have a publicity committee that will do us a little good. We can do it, and of course, we have the power."

. . . MORTGAGE CRACKDOWN

meet the payments, he had interceded on their behalf and as a result the company had agreed to cut $500 off its bonus of $1,200.

In view of the response by the firm, Brousson said, he would not identify it. But he did go on to name several other companies and mention some mortgages in which they had been involved.

One was General Securities Ltd., owned by Burrard Mortgages and Investments, which had charged a $2,000 bonus — or 50 per cent of total proceeds — on a $4,000 first mortgage against a $15,000 home.

Another involved Trinity Properties Ltd., which Brousson said is part of a "pretty big group" owned by a man called Mike Poppell, who has "quite an empire" of finance companies, used car lots and mortgage companies.

For a loan of $2,150 (including $150 legal fees) Trinity required a $1,000 bonus, or 47 per cent.

Brousson mentioned another case where the actual loan was $3,500, the bonus charged $1,000 and the monthly payments over five years (at 24 per cent interest) were $90.

"In five years he would have paid out $5,400 and still owe the original $4,500," he said. "The interest rate exactly matches what he is paying out each month."

In this case, he said, the company involved was Dupont Acceptance Corporation which had since been sold to a man named Walter Link and was now known as Link Developments.

Brousson charged that many of the companies which advertise mortgage facilities are under common ownership, but have different names and telephone numbers so that "people are confused."

He also claimed that many advertisements offering private funds for financing are, in fact, offered by individuals who work for mortgage companies by day and indulge in this activity as a form of "moonlighting."

This, he said, is in direct contravention of the Mortgage Brokers Act.

Brousson said many of the unethical practices now prevalent were brought to the attention of former attorney-general Leslie Peterson, who did nothing to correct the situation.

Urging a thorough study of the problem, he suggested that amendments to the legislation could be brought in this fall, if there is insufficient time in the current session.

Heroin Thrown From Moving Car

A 21-year-old man, arrested last September after throwing 21 caps of heroin from a car while being pursued by RCMP undercover agents, today was remanded in custody on a reduced charge of possession of heroin.

Joseph Bruce Paul Podfigorny pleaded guilty to the possession charge. He had originally been charged Sept. 11 with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

FOR OWN USE

Crown Prosecutor Bob Johnstone today withdrew this charge, for want of sufficient evidence. The accused had since claimed the narcotic was for his own use.. On Sept. 10, RCMP drug squad agents had a house in the 1200 block Balmoral under surveillance. Agents trailed Podfigorny as he left the house around 4:45 in the afternoon.

Near Victoria General Hospital, the accused threw a pink balloon, later found to contain 21 caps of heroin, searched at Victoria police headquarters, another cap was found in the man's trouser pocket and a charge of heroin trafficking was laid.

Judge William Ostler agreed to have the man remanded in custody to Feb. 20 for presentence report because of the quantity of the from his car window. When narcotic.

places to dig was by the creek, because there used to be an old dump here. But we didn't think you needed to get the mayor's permission to dig, so we just started digging. That was a few weeks ago.

Their first attempt at excavation attracted a neighbor's attention and before the youths knew it they were being told by police that digging on the property was outlawed.

"So we went to the mayor," said Rod, as if it were the natural thing for them to do.

Mayor Frances Elford turned advocate for the two boys at Monday night's council meeting. She said the boys had told her there was "grand treasure to be found in old dumps."

With expectations like that, the boys were given permission providing they put every piece of turf back in place.

And their instints about dumps have proven successful.

Arrest Adds to Drug Scandal

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A key figure in the cracking of the famous "French Connection" drug case of more than a decade ago was charged Monday with selling heroin with a street value of more than $200,000.

Federal agents identified him as Francis Waters, 43, the Federal Bureau of Narcotics agent in charge of breaking up the international "French Connection" drug ring in the early 1960s.

Waters's arrest adds new scandal to the "French Connection" case, coming only two months after disclosures that most of the heroin seized in the disbandment of the gang had been stolen from the New York City police vaults where it had been held.

Since the bureau was incorporated into a large federal organization in 1969, five agents have been arrested and charged with drug dealings and 40 have resigned after being investigated.

Waters, now the manager of an East Side New York bar, was charged with selling about a pound of heroin in 1968, a year after he quit the bureau.

Federal agents said the heroin Waters allegedly sold had a street value of $200,000. They said tests were being conducted to determine whether the heroin was part of the 80 pounds, worth $18 million, stolen from the "French Connection" cache.

The "French Connection" gained international fame through a best-selling book and a motion picture which gave most of the credit for the breakup of the gang to a former New York City police officer, Eddie Egan.

Waters, unhappy with the role assigned to him in the film, sued the producers last year for $1 million. He claimed the film showed him to be an incompetent who gets himself killed at the picture's end. The suit was dismissed by the New York State Supreme Court last June.

Hemorrhoids?
New Anusol Plus will quickly ease the pain, soothe the itch, and cool the burning.

That's the promise we make for new Anusol Plus.

Because the pain of hemorrhoids can be intense, we designed new Anusol Plus to give you really fast relief.

To do this, it contains a topical anaesthetic.

Almost as soon as you apply it, you'll notice an easing of that throbbing, burning sensation.

And, with it, the pain and itching will have all but disappeared.

And while Anusol Plus works quickly, the relief that it gives will last for hours.

Of course, easing the pain is just part of what Anusol's brand new formula does to help your hemorrhoids.

It contains a gentle decongestant to help reduce swelling and inflammation, plus two soothing antiseptic agents to curb the spread of infection.

To help shield tender tissues from irritation, it contains a rich, protective emollient.

One other thing. So the medication itself won't add to your suffering, new Anusol Plus comes in a silky-smooth cream.

This means it goes on easily. Even on spots that are tender and inflamed.

New Anusol Plus is now at your pharmacy, in cream form or suppository.

It'll give you fast relief from the pain, the itch, and the burning of hemorrhoids.

That's a promise.

Police Deaths Spark Review of Gun Laws

Times News Services

TORONTO — Gun control laws are under review by the Ontario solicitor-general's department following the recent fatal shooting of two Toronto policemen and the wounding of a third.

"We are looking at the whole list of restricted weapons," Solicitor-General John Yaremko said Monday.

But he said Ontario can only make recommendations to Ottawa because gun legislation comes under the federal Criminal Code.

But in Ottawa, Justice Minister Otto Lang said he is opposed to tightening regulations on grounds that they affect the law-abiding citizen more than the criminal.

Lang also cautioned MPs in the House not to blame the Liberals' controversial bail reform legislation for violent crimes such as the shooting of policemen in Toronto.

He was speaking in the House after Reg Stackhouse (PC—Scarborough East) asked if the shooting of a third Toronto policeman last weekend shows a need to reconsider bail provisions or gun laws.

Stackhouse said police associations have called for regulations to control ownership and registration of firearms.

Lang recalled that gun control legislations are under review by the government at present but added that the problem is that regulations "certainly interfere with the ordinary activities of a lot of law-abiding citizens, whereas in no way are they certain to interfere with the activities of criminals."

Statistics indicate there are 200,000 registered handguns in Ontario. Rifles, shotguns, starters' pistols and gas-powered pellet pistols do not require registration.

Most dealers and gun club officials oppose the recommendation by Syd Brown, president of the 4,000-member Metro Toronto Police Association, for a temporary ban on all gun sales.

William Holman, a partner in a gunsmith firm, said he knows most of those who buy from his firm. In 20 years of business he had never known one of his customers to be involved in a criminal activity using a gun.

However, Sam Presutti, owner of a sports store, said he had stopped selling handguns. He thought sales should be limited to businessmen protecting their cash and to policemen.

Boys Bulldoze House

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Two 13-year-old boys smashed a new house with a bulldozer to protest its construction on their favorite rabbit hunting field, sheriff's officers said today.

The single-storey three-bedroom house in Lemmon Valley was one of several being built in the area. Workmen left the job at night and returned the next morning to find it reduced to rubble.

Sheriff's officers said the boys drove a bulldozer from a construction storage area three-fourths of a mile away, and ran it through the house four times.

Maple Bay Against Project

A B.C. Supreme Court chambers hearing was told today that Maple Bay residents are adamantly opposed to massive city development being carried out on rural Mount Tzouhalem.

The hearing was told that they don't believe a prediction of a population explosion in North Cowichan, made by a Vancouver firm is correct.

The hearing, before Mr. Justice P. D. Seaton, has part of a fight by a citizens' committee to have a North Cowichan bylaw allowing 1,500 housing units to be built on 505 acres by the Vancouver firm of Kingsview Properties Ltd., to be declared invalid.

In testimony today, school principal John Cowans said he did not agree with a population report, made by Associated Engineers of Vancouver.

Earlier, Ald. Dennis Hogan said the report predicted that the present population of about 12,000 would soar to 25,000 by 1985.

Cowans said he had seen no evidence that there was foundation in the report's findings.

"I don't agree with those figures," he said. "I only know by the school population, which has gone down except in the unorganized areas."

He added, "I'm against city development in a rural area."

At Monday's session of the hearing Dr. John Gow read from an affidavit submitted by North Cowichan's municipal clerk A. Vande Casteyen.

Council's solicitor David Williams told Mr. Justice P. D. Seaton that Casteyen was "medically unwell" and unable to appear.

The affidavit said that Kingsview Properties Ltd. had been instructed to draw up the land-use contract and that the municipality would add its engineering and other requirements later.

In the absence of Casteyen, Gow cross-examined Ald. Hogan, who had been with Casteyen when D. H. Russell of the Committee of Residents of Maple Bay Road and Area and lawyer Tom Lines had asked for particulars of the land-use contract Jan. 15.

Both Russell and Lines have said they were denied particulars and told to put their request in writing.

On Monday, Hogan said he did not remember Casteyen or himself being asked for this information.

Asked by Gow why the council had not brought in any outside experts for advice on the project, Hogan said they "saw no need for it."

Gow asked why neither the advertisement announcing the public hearing or the land-use contract bore the name of the developers. He asked why, at the public hearing, the company's name had not been mentioned or the details of the land-use contract explained.

Hogan said each member of the council had had a copy of the contract on his desk but nobody present had asked for details.

Gow pressed Hogan for the reason why council had not included engineering and other requirements in the land-use contract.

Hogan replied, "These matters could be dealt with by passage of an authorizing bylaw."

Domestic Fuel Requirements To Be Guarded

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald's warning that Ottawa is ready to impose export controls on oil as early as March, will come under examination by the Commons committee on national resources.

He assured the Commons Monday that the federal government will ensure that there will be adequate oil supplies to meet Canadian needs during the coming spring months of March, April and May.

The whole question of Canada's supplies of oil and gas and the mounting demands from the United States for increased energy supplies will be explored in the committee.

T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) at the opening of the house Monday said Macdonald had told the house Friday he would welcome an opportunity to discuss the availability of oil supplies in Canada. Accordingly Douglas moved that the report of the energy mines and resources department be referred to the standing committee.

Unanimous consent from all sides of the house was granted and the motion passed.

Macdonald has declared the government will impose export controls on oil if the industry does not voluntarily take adequate measures to fill domestic fuel needs. He said the government wants to give the industry a chance to work out a solution first; if it cannot then the government will impose restrictions.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield enquired Monday if any agreement has been reached with the U.S. in the one area that the minister has said is under discussion, that is assurance of the supply of oil to eastern Canada in the event of eastern Canada's sources of offshore oil being cut off?

No Specific Assurances

Macdonald said no agreement had been reached. At present he is looking forward to renewed discussions with officials on the question.

He also told Stanfield the U.S. is not seeking specific assurances with regard to the continued supply of oil or gas from western Canada.

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu-Appelle-Moose Mount) expressed surprise over the statement by Macdonald that the government of Quebec has advised Ottawa it does not intend to sell any power from the James Bay Power project to the U.S.

Macdonald said that up to the present he has no indication that any part of that power would be sold to Ontario or outside Canada.

"Our understanding is that the site will be developed for purposes of Quebec load itself," he said.

Replying to another question from Hamilton the minister said the question of a national power grid did not enter the picture insofar as the James Bay Power project is concerned.

Electricity Sharing

One of the objectives of the energy policy should be to promote wherever possible, the interchange of electric power among the provinces. Specifically with regard to the James Bay project Macdonald said it is for consumption in Quebec only.

Douglas expressed surprise over the minister's statement that Ottawa may have to impose export controls on oil in March. He said that as late as Jan. 9 the minister was assuring the house there was no problem in continuing supplies for refinery stocks. Now he appeared to have reversed himself.

He asked why the change?

Macdonald said President Richard Nixon in a statement ten days ago indicated a further increase in the U.S. quota on the importation of Canadian oil.

However the minister hastened to reassure the members that will be adequate oil supplies to meet Canadian needs in the coming months of March, April and May. He reiterated that if the industry shows that it is incapable of meeting the prior commitment of the Canadian refineries the government will take action under the National Energy Board act to make sure that happens.

Printer Talks Fail

Mediation officer Charles Stewart has turned in his report following failure of talks to settle a dispute at Dow Print Limited which prints the Victorian Weekly.

A spokesman for Graphic Arts International Union in Vancouver declined comment on whether the union will take a strike vote.

"I'm still hoping it won't come to that," he said. He declined to detail the issues.

The union is seeking a first contract with Dow Print on behalf of its three members involved in platemaking and presswork.

Graphic Arts International Union is the new name for the Lithographers and Photoengravers International Union and the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, which merged last year.

Mercury Montego MX 2-Door Hardtop

Montego's tremendous sales success in the past year is due, in part, to a ride that's so smooth, quiet and comfortable, you'll actually think you're riding in a more expensive car. In fact, you've no idea how Montego's wide stance and high-stability suspension, together with special butyl rubber bushings to isolate your car's frame, can reduce road noise and harsh vibrations and add to your driving pleasure — until you try this better idea car with the big car ride.

Styled with a long, low, classic profile, it is an elegant attractive-looking car. And, for such a moderate price, it has a high level of luxury that includes deep, foam-padded seats in vinyl and rich, pleasing fabrics and styled in a low-back design to provide better rear view visibility for the driver. 100% nylon loop-pile carpeting; power ventilation; and extra sound-proofing materials that help make each trip a quiet experience. For added convenience, every Montego is equipped with an inside hood latch release and lighting has been added to more of the controls.

Montego also comes with the whole complement of Ford Motor Company Safety Features including energy-absorbing perimeter frame construction, steel guard rails in every door and the new energy-absorbing bumper system.

There are nine models of Montego including two exciting-looking wagons with a cargo area of 91.6 cubic feet.

Mercury Montego's ride and comfort make driving a pleasure. And, like its price tag, it's easy to handle.

A Slippery Path for Oil

It came as a shock to laymen to learn last week that Canada might suffer an oil shortage in March as a result of increased demand from the United States and growing consumption at home. Now Energy Minister Macdonald has assured the country that there should be no problem during March, April and May. But the need for even this assurance rings oddly in a country wealthy with vast oil resources and dotted with capped wells which are said to be only waiting for favorable market conditions to pour their contents into pipelines.

The suddenly drastic shortage in the United States has illustrated the value of Canadian supplies to that country, as well as the hidden problems entailed in the Canadian position. If there were to be a shortage in Canada, we would have every right to cut down on exports and direct the oil into domestic consumption. But the impact of such an action on the United States could be fairly serious. Consumers dependent on the Canadian flow would register strong complaints, despite the Canadian need. And this reaction might accompany even a refusal to increase our exports if the United States called for larger supplies. (Washington has already increased the quota of oil allowed into the country from Canada).

But apart from the argument of established consumption which would no doubt greet a sudden Canadian retention of its resources for domestic use, there is also the matter of Canada's contingent dependence on eastern American sources for oil for the eastern provinces. Potential Maritimes offshore oil resources, if they materialize, could be a long time in becoming a fact, as Mr. Macdonald points out. In the meantime oil imports by eastern Canada could run into impediments from a number of causes. It is essential to maintain the "American connection" in a viable and ready condition.

Mr. Douglas, the NDP member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, has raised the question of extension of the Canadian pipeline beyond the Ottawa Valley — the arbitrary point at which the Western Canadian oil flow is halted. But this would have drawbacks, despite the obvious advantage of avoiding the need for foreign supplies. For one thing, the cost of oil in the eastern provinces would rise considerably over the current price. For another, the cost of pipeline construction is not warranted, says Mr. Macdonald, while the possibility of large Maritimes supplies is still active.

Clearly, the Canadian oil situation is complicated. It has to be, to explain why a country with one of the world's great oil resources is talking in terms of shortage for its domestic users. What will happen in the not-so-distant future, when the shortage becomes real instead of merely technical, should already be engrossing the minds of engineers, producers, and the politicians responsible for a national policy which will regard the interests of Canada as having top priority over short-term gains from too expansive an export policy.

Experts are already describing the United States shortage as more than a temporary embarrassment, even though large supplies are still available from the Middle East, South America, and American domestic wells. Some see it as the first stage of the eventual drought which has been so freely predicted. If that is correct, it should be accompanied by the first stage of measures to meet that predicament. Those measures should not include draining Canada first.

The Overlooked Abstract

Adam Robertson, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, establishes a commendable atmosphere of conciliation between teachers, students and trustees in his comment published in the current issue of the B.C. Teacher.

Mr. Robertson calls on readers of that publication to consider the abstracts represented by the words "pupils, teachers, principals, superintendents and trustees" in terms of personalized individuals—real people.

His philosophical treatment of the responsibilities of authority — the desirability of those possessing it to make their capabilities available to others without imposing orders on a servant — should be generally approved.

But in his treatment, he appears to have fallen short of total acceptance of the concept of the individual as a real person, rather than an abstract. He seems to have overlooked the abstract "taxpayers" who are also flesh and blood individuals. Prick them and they bleed — and many believe they have been bled too much in processes involving teachers, students and school trustees.

"Let's develop a value system," suggests Mr. Robertson, "that grants to everyone in education the chance to develop a private brand of individuality, subject only to legitimate social constraints."

An excellent suggestion, provided "everyone in education" includes the cost-paying homeowner, whose chance to develop a private brand of individuality may be lost if the financial sinews of home-ownership are stretched by education to the breaking point.

". . . can I wear my war medals when they hang me tomorrow . . .?

JAMES H. GRAY

Will Alberta Be Blamed?

CALGARY: That most woefully bedraggled of all straw men, the threat of Socialism, got another oratorical pummeling here the other day. Having served Premier E. C. Manning's needs for a political bogey-man for 35 years it has now been adopted by premier Peter Lougheed. Wrapping himself in the mantle of free enterprise, he served notice on any NDP provincial premiers within earshot to keep their hands off and noses out of Alberta.

What's got into Lougheed, anyway? Is he trying to undermine a western united front against the federal Liberal Government before Prime Minister Trudeau comes to call next summer? Or is he only trying to rebuild some political fences blown into disarray by his two-priced natural gas policy?

The professional readers of the Lougheed mind are seeing all kinds of implications in the premier's ringing denunciation of Socialism. Here are some of them:

His recent decision to increase his exactions from the oil industry by $70 million a year was a shocker to his main body of support in Calgary and Edmonton. His blast can be seen as reassurance that the industry has nothing to fear of nationalization in Alberta. Premier Barrett of British Columbia has recently done some out-loud thinking about taking over the oil and natural gas industry.

Nudge Toward Oblivion

It may be that Lougheed has simply decided to nudge poor old Social Credit nearer oblivion by expropriating its most cherished shibboleth.

It could be that the speech was an effort to cultivate the Federal Tories who, like everybody else outside Alberta, have been alienated by his announced policy of forcing higher prices on gas consumers.

This policy has run the count to two strikes before Lougheed ever comes to bat in the next Conservative leadership campaign. Not since W. L. Mackenzie King blew the duke in 1930 with his declaration that he would give "not a five cent piece" to any provincial Conservative administration, has a Canadian politician gone to such lengths to alienate politicos and voters alike.

The strange thing is that he could have got everything he wanted by doing what he had to do and keeping his mouth shut. In putting pressure on the natural gas industry to raise the field price by at least 10 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, he was on very solid ground. This superb energy source has been outrageously underpriced for a decade.

The trouble lay in the way it was done. By getting the price boosted 10 cents, Lougheed will increase the province's income from natural gas royalties by around $30 million a year. The province gets a royalty of about 15 per cent on all the gas produced on Crown lands. Unhappily the same increase will increase the profits of the international oil companies, who own most of the gas production, by upwards of $150 million a year.

PREMIER LOUGHEED
. . . shocking decision

Moreover, because of a sensitivity about the reaction of his Alberta constituents to an increase in fuel costs, Lougheed announced that he would establish a system that would give Albertans a lower price than the outlanders, east or west, had to pay.

This two-price gambit was obviously to neutralize any criticism that might have arisen from Lougheed's opposition. Instead it has given Grant Notley, the only NDP politician to win a seat in the legislature for almost 25 years, all kinds of talking points. And Notley has been able to get more mileage out of his criticism than a dozen of ordinary opposition members might expect.

Simple arithmetic in Notley's hands demonstrates that Lougheed is robbing the Canadian people to enrich the international oil companies. Additionally, he claims, they are taking their Alberta profits and spending them in every place but Alberta. This last criticism is difficult to sustain. The proposed boost in gas prices has set off such a flurry of wildcat drilling in search of more gas that the drilling business is enjoying its best year in fifteen.

The irony of the situation is that Lougheed could have accomplished everything he desired if he had simply forced through the natural gas price increase and resisted the two-price idea. All that did was trumpet to the world that the rest of Canada would have to pay a lot more for gas while Albertans got it for a lot less.

Easy Alternative

All he had to do was let the price of gas rise and, when it was reflected in higher domestic prices for Albertans, to declare a natural resources dividend, precisely as he did with crude oil.

The $70 million additional revenues to be extracted from crude oil producers will ultimately be reflected by increases at the gasoline pumps here and in the United States, though relating cause to effect is hazardously hairy in the oil business.

Lougheed went on television to announce that henceforth Alberta homeowners and tenants will be bonused to the extent of $216 a year. Income from the natural resources of Alberta is to be used to remove the cost of education from the home owners of the province.

It is doubtful if a single motorist in all Canada will identify the Alberta home owners grants with the extra penny or two he will be paying at the gas pumps. But every burner of natural gas will be quickly able to identify the cause of the whopping increases of his heating bills next winter and the winters that follow. It will be Lougheed's two-price gas system for Alberta.

For a youngish politician with his eye on the main chance there's a phrase that applies to such monumental political blunders. To wit: Lougheed's folly.

C. L. SULZBERGER

We're in a Multipolar World

NEW YORK — When he was but a Prussian diplomat, Bismarck concluded: "We live in a wondrous time in which the strong is weak because of his moral scruples and the weak grows strong because of his audacity." Bismarck was scarcely restrained by these reflections when he later moved up the power ladder. Yet one might say that this is a good epitaph for the American experience in Indochina.

Few small nations have proven more audacious than the redoubtable North Vietnamese, the Prussians of Southeast Asia. And few strong nations have proven more hapless than the United States which, despite what its enemies may say, generally adhered to scruples which prevented it from exercising all its superpower might.

In the conflict just terminated — at least the American phase — we learned that on the battlefield of revolutionary warfare a new kind of logic prevails: with respect to the rational, the irrational is as ten to one. Perhaps the only comforting aspect of the settlement, which both sides claim as victory, is that by producing compromise it avoided two dangerous extremes. Victory is the greatest tragedy in the world — except defeat. This was neither.

Volatile

Although power may indeed eventually pass, the hatreds it engenders are more lasting. This may be more true for reactions abroad than for obvious passions inspired inside the United States. America is an enormously volatile country and the patterns of its emotional kaleidoscope are subject to sudden, striking change.

It is distressing to note that whereas the U.S.A. during almost every year since World War II could see an increase in the number and strength of its friends, since it seriously intervened in Vietnam it has seen an increase in the number of its adversaries and in the weakness of its supporters. It will take time to rectify this trend and the rueful triumph of experience over hope.

It is not entirely unnatural that the United States embraced a policy of global intervention since, for previous decades, we had accepted similar behavior within the hemispheric area embraced by the Monroe Doctrine and even extended it deep into the Pacific as far as Hawaii and the Philippines.

New doctrines postulated on the theory of intervention became the custom after 1945. The concept was initially postulated by President Truman with his somewhat Manichean opposition to forcible extension of Communist ideology.

The Dulles doctrine (given deadly meaning by Admiral Radford's massive retaliation strategy) souped this up. President Kennedy modified the Radford application rather than the ideological approach, as shown particularly by the Bay of Pigs disaster.

JOHN KENNEDY
. . . modified the application

President Johnson adhered to the fundamental Truman concept, as he showed in the Dominican Republic as well as Indochina. And although Mr. Nixon erases the unabashed ideological approach, he still promises help to menaced nations which help themselves.

The United States has intervened in a great many areas since it suddenly realized almost thirty years ago that, as a world power, it had world responsibilities. The only way it seemed to understand applying these responsibilities was by using the same methods previously applied in its Latin-American backyard.

Possibly because of our habitual desire to get things done swiftly and efficiently it took us years to learn Talleyrand's admonition: "Nonintervention is a political and metaphysical term and means about the same as intervention." This is not just a clever phrase.

Intervention Record

During our period of global (as compared to hemispheric) intervention, America moved successfully to bolster Greece and Turkey and to protect Berlin, but unsuccessfully in offshore Cuba. It managed to preserve the Korean status quo, to bolster part of Laos, and now to stave off at least initial chaos in South Vietnam. Some interventions worked, some didn't; some cost more than they were worth. But, with the Stalin - Khrushchev - Brezhnev doctrines applying in the obverse, it is apparent the Communist superpower will not permit crushing a Communist state or its ideological reversion to the West — just as it has become apparent that the opposite is true, even under the more restrained Nixon Doctrine.

In respective spheres of direct influence — Hungary and Czechoslovakia for Moscow, the Dominican Republic for the United States—the superpowers somehow acknowledge embarrassed acceptance of brutal reality. Cuba and Yugoslavia have been notable exceptions. Where Indochina will end up on this roster is still unknown. Nobody can forget that in this particular game, China also plays a massive role. This is now a multipolar world.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

For Landowners

Surely a cornerstone of our Canadian democratic system is the principle that a man's home is his castle, and that no one shall interfere with his fundamental right to enjoy, develop, bequeath or dispose of his land. Similarly, it is a basic right of those who do not yet own land to acquire property of their own on the open market.

The B.C. Landowners' Association believes implicitly in these basic principles. The present land freeze imposed by the B.C. government is in violation of both of the above, and may in fact be downright illegal. We see alarming indications that pending legislation will not serve to restore these basic rights, and will jeopardize the incentive for improvement that stems from healthy pride of ownership.

Some worrisome questions need to be asked and answered at once:

1. How is a man to divide his land among his family as they come of age, if he so wishes?
2. What happens to farmland when it becomes unsuitable for agricultural purposes?
3. How can older people who can no longer work their place manage to retain the home in which they have lived for years if they cannot dispose of the additional land no longer needed?
4. After our fundamental right to develop or dispose of our land is taken away, what other basic rights will we lose next?

There are alternatives that might prove acceptable to all concerned, if landowners are granted an opportunity for discussion with the government. We need all concerned citizens as members. To learn more about the B.C. Landowners' Association, please write P.O. Box 1398, Vernon, B.C.—Len Klinger, President.

Coverage

As a transplanted Westerner, I was most impressed by an article in last week's Globe and Mail describing Mayor Pollen's suggestion for the creation of a B.C. Press Council.

During the past five years, I have been fortunate to have received daily the Globe and Mail and the Toronto Star. However, whenever I return to the West Coast I really wonder how any one of the Victoria or Vancouver daily papers could furnish any responsible citizen with sufficient knowledge to understand what is going on in the world around him.

I feel it is about time that some pressure were exerted on each of the major newspapers to expand more on national and international press coverage (even if this reduces all advertisements to one-third their present size).

Perhaps one day I (and many others) may find a British Columbia newspaper on a Toronto newstand.—Patricia Izard, Toronto.

'Supergroup' Out in Trudeau Office Overhaul

By PETER DESBARATS

Everyone who is asked to talk about Martin O'Connell provides the same assessment.

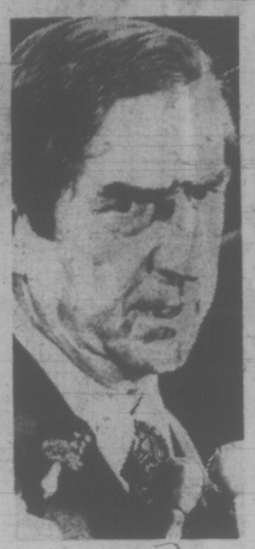
"Don't let that mild-mannered exterior fool you," they say. "He's one of the toughest little guys in Ottawa." Some of the descriptions are less polite. "Stubborn as hell," said a prominent labor lawyer in Montreal, recalling an all-night negotiating session when O'Connell was minister of labor in the Trudeau cabinet.

As the prime minister's new principal secretary and chief of staff, the tough little guy has more than lived up to his reputation. With as little fanfare as possible, he has virtually demolished the "supergroup" — the inner bureaucracy of the prime minister's office that has surrounded Trudeau since 1968.

Swift, Thorough

The swiftness and thoroughness of the change has been concealed by the fact that some of the key members of the group still appear to be firmly in place. But they themselves are under no illusions about what has happened. They say privately that the arrival of O'Connell shortly after the October election has meant a basic change in the philosophy and purpose of the prime minister's office.

Inaccessible to journalists since he moved into the east block, O'Connell suddenly opened up last month with a series of interviews and off-the-record conversations with members of the Ottawa press corps.



O'CONNELL
. . . wields broom

Since then, there has been a spate of stories about the "people-oriented" outlook of the new administration.

O'Connell has been quoted as saying, "If you lose public support, you have to stop and reconsider."

A Barrier

This process of reviewing the function of the prime minister's office has involved a tacit admission that at least some of the criticism of the "supergroup" since 1968 has been valid.

After Trudeau took office, the growing entourage in the PMO was seen, by some members of Parliament and the press, as a barrier between the Prime Minister and the people.

Former prime minister Diefenbaker described it as "that million-dollar menagerie" of "desks, subdesks, and top desks." But the PMO also had critics within the Liberal caucus, as well as among party members across the country. The attacks from within the party became intense after the diappointing result of the Oct. 30 election. Liberals who felt that the prime minister's campaign had been a failure started to hunt for scapegoats among the key people in his own office. The PMO staff retorted by blaming the politicians.

As one of them replied angrily when he was cornered by a group of disappointed Liberal candidates, "elections aren't won or lost during a campaign. You can't wipe out the impression left by four years in office in a single campaign."

Far from being repentant, the original members of the prime minister's staff were proud of their record. Most of them were with Trudeau before he became prime minister, and responded enthusiastically in 1968 when he asked them to draw up a plan for reorganizing and expanding the PMO. They took their lead from Marc Lalonde, former principal secretary to Trudeau and now health minister, who once described the function of the PMO as "the systematic application of scientific or other organized knowledge to practical tasks."

Inspired by this concept, the PMO became innovative as well as administrative. Program Secretary Jim Davey was deeply involved in planning and policy questions. Trudeau's principal adviser on external affairs, Ivan Head, not only played a Kissinger-type role in certain situations but gradually took over most of the speechwriting assignments. Lalonde himself was so omnipresent that his growing public reputation as a "power behind the throne" began to erode his effectiveness.

More Responsive

The staff of the PMO saw its systematic organization as a means to make the prime minister more accessible to more people, and more responsive to various sectors of the population. The system of regional desks, for instance, was organized to break through barriers between people at the local level and the national leader.

But inevitably, the PMO itself became a centre of power.

Describing a similar development in Washington under recent presidents, an American journalist writes in the current issue of "Atlantic" that "the inevitable accretion of power in the White House stems in part from the fact that there is really no other way to run the government.

"The more the government does, the more there must be a central body to co-ordinate its workings."

In Ottawa, as in Washington, the leader's staff became a competing power group, in conflict with elements in the cabinet, the caucus and the senior bureaueracy. One of the measures of its effectivness was the amount of resistance it stirred up within the other groups.

From 1968 to 1971, Martin O'Connell observed this process from within the Liberal caucus. Although he had known Trudeau since 1967 and had been active in introducing him to Ontario Liberals before the 1968 leadership convention, he had little personal contact with the prime minister during those years. He claims now that he never regarded the PMO as a barrier between MPs and the Prime Minister, but one of the first things he has done in his new position is to abolish the whole system of regional desks. It is not "downgraded," as previously reported. It is finished.

Some Resentment

O'Connell has in mind a more compact and far less visible PMO. Both the caucus and party hierarchy are in full agreement. As a senior party official said, "less innovation and more administration" is the right idea. If this implies a criticism of the old "supergroup," and creates some resentment among its members, O'Connell seems ready to live with that.

But appearances — as the old "supergroup" learned to its annoyance — can often be deceptive. The old group was less powerful than many of its enemies assumed. The new PMO may well turn out to be like O'Connell himself, small, unassuming but a surprisingly tough competitor.

Yugoslavia: Bold Experiment in Trouble

By DAN MORGAN
The Washington Post

BELGRADE — Last November, Yugoslavia's largest electronics firm had 100,000 television sets in its warehouse, no buyers for them, and for several days, no cash to pay the workers who had put them together.

Early in January, the plant in the Serbian city of Kragujevac that manufactures the Yugoslav Fiat had 4,800 unpurchased, snow-covered cars on its lots when it shut down its assembly line temporarily and furloughed many of its 26,000 workers for 10 days.

The cutback came as the factory was in the middle of an ambitious expansion program in which it had just invested $132 million.

A communist country with a glut of TV sets and automobiles may be the envy of Soviet-style economies that don't produce enough of either to satisfy consumers. But in Yugoslavia, the unsold surpluses are signs of trouble in a bold experiment.

In 1965, Yugoslavia introduced the most radical reform ever tried in a communist country. The reform's architects borrowed many of the laws of capitalist economics to make industry more innovative and dynamic.

Some people dubbed it "laissez-faire socialism" because of its reliance on decentralization, private initiative, market forces like freer prices and wages, and factory independence. The state and the communist party were supposed to stop meddling in the running of the economy.

That interlude of almost complete economic permissiveness seems to be over now, after chaotic growth, inflation, uncovered and unfinished investments, and industrial insolvency.

Government and parliament have intervened more resolutely in the economy than at any time since 1965. Prices and wages are controlled. Thousands of workers are paying part of their wages into newly established state relief funds for insolvent industries — either in special refundable taxes or short-term municipal bonds, which they are supposed to buy voluntarily.

The relief for the debt-ridden factories may only be temporary. Perhaps as many as 360 which still can't pay their 1971 bills are in the hands of their creditors. Some may be forced to close under the terms of the toughest bankruptcy law ever promulgated in a communist country.

The federal government in Belgrade asked for and got from the federal assembly special powers to order wages of workers cut by as much as 10 per cent in order to save money-losing enterprises.

Austerity has even been extended to bureaucrats. Some of the worst offenders in the spending spree of the last five years apparently were municipal governments, which started countless projects they couldn't pay for. The federal government last month ruled they must pay off their obligations now or "all officials, whether elected or appointed" will be subject to pay cuts.

The austerity program coincides with President Tito's broader drive to re-establish the Communist Party as the dominant political force in the country.

To some degree, the intervention of the central government and the party seem to be at odds with Tito's principal social innovation, workers' self-management. In 1952 Tito and his advisers broke sharply with Soviet ideology, rejecting the Soviet idea that workers can have a say in factories that are controlled by state ministries and a vast state bureaucracy.

The Yugoslavs transferred management of the plants to the workers themselves, gradually reduced the role of central planners and central ministries, and let elected workers' councils run the plants. Yugoslav firms stayed public in that nobody owned them except "society as a whole." But state ownership was rejected.

Self-management is no propaganda gimmick. Through it, universities, research institutes, even hospitals (and of course factories) have gained more autonomy from state bureaucracies. The system made Yugoslav society more pluralistic than any other communist society, by vesting real power in grassroots organizations.

That is why the dose of state and party intervention worries some liberals. High officials concede that self-management has been suspended or curbed in many places. Workers can hardly run their factories when their enterprises are in the hands of banks and creditors or when they have only the narrowest power to set prices and wages and decide on new investments.

It seems unthinkable that Tito would abandon the experiment that won Yugoslavia so much prestige abroad and prosperity at home. Senior officials insist that the curbs on self-management are temporary. They say the aim of Tito's new policy is to actually win back for the workers' councils the power that had drifted to factory directors, expert politicians, and banks and capital-rich export-import firms.

After the ouster of police overseer and centralist Aleksander Rankovic in 1966, many expected self-management would have more room to flourish. But they were surprised by some of the side effects of the economic reform.

Social inequities grew, often at the expense of the ordinary workingman. An already affluent middle class grew richer, often by profiteering on state-owned flats and evading taxes. A diligent private car wash operator in Belgrade can earn more than $100 a day — a sum for which a factory worker in Serbia labors almost a month.

Sociological studies made for the Yugoslav trade unions tended to confirm Tito's charges that workers' councils had lost influence to directors and managers. The studies showed a decline in the number of workers on the councils (to which engineers and white-collar employees also belong) and a fall-off in the participation of the councils themselves in decision-making.

Strikes by workers against factories they control are hard to understand. But after 1965, the number of such strikes increased. If the reform caused a sharp rise in aspirations, those aspirations when unmet apparently forced workers to vent their frustrations outside the framework provided by the self-management system.

The rise of a class of expert technocrats might seem natural and desirable in modernizing society. But in Yugoslavia, it has ideological implications.

According to politicians who back the Tito line, the "laissezfaire" period also encouraged spirit of managerial arrogance and high-handedness. Some bosses began to act pretty much as if they owned their plants. Others established their own network of supply contracts with often more efficient private operators. The press has been full of stories of corruption, kickbacks, and financial wheeler-dealers.

As long as wages rose, the workers went along; when inflation and unmet payrolls suddenly hit, the bubble burst.

The big established enterprises didn't encourage competition and they did their best to hold on to their privileged positions to block new self-managed enterprises, which they accused of being nouveau capitalist. To the detriment of self-management, they often acted like monopolies and used pull with local politicians to keep their privileges.

Workers councils also felt they were deprived of access to capital, which tended to accumulate in such non-productive sectors of the economy as tourist enterprises and export-import firms.

Still worse, in the view of self-management advocates, self-management often didn't seem to apply at the level of national politics. There, communist power politics seemed to dominate and, as one official put it, "workers were simply guests at the political table."

YOUNG LEAVING

BELGRADE — A young Belgrade student who was late for a law examination hailed a taxi the other day and asked the driver to hurry.

"What's the rush," the young cab driver said. "I already have a law degree. But what good is it doing me? My advice to you is stop worrying about your tests and start accumulating capital."

Inadequate job opportunities for young people, particularly for university graduates, is a big problem in Yugoslavia. Although 400,000 have graduated since 1945, a university degree is not always a gateway to opportunity.

Dozens of vacated apartments in Belgrade — a city with a severe housing shortage — testify to the exodus of many of the country's most promising young people. The apartments are for rent because their owners are young professional people who have left Yugoslavia for better paying and often more responsible positions in the West.

Yugoslavia's difficulties in providing incentives for young people — common to many developing countries — have helped foster a climate of apathy and cynicism among the youth population. The complaints of young people tend to be concrete ones, involving the poor quality of student housing, inadequate stipends that leave many at the poverty level, the rigid educational system and the difficulty of finding a good brain drain.

Tito and his lieutenants have made clear they want to impose party control over the youth. This new line marks an apparent end to the period that began with the 1968 Belgrade student demonstrations. After that, student organizations got more independence from party control and had more say in university decision-making.

However, the 1971 Zagreb University demonstrations convinced Tito that the League of Communists, the name of Yugoslavia's communist party, had lost control of the youth movement and should reassert its authority.

However, many doubt that the party will be able to effect basic changes in youth attitudes.

Young people have had a long period of exposure to all kinds of ideas. They know how to think for themselves now. This is not 1948. "You are not going to erase the effects of this," said a sociologist.

The Case for the Minority

By JOHN NICHOL

Tommy Douglas, when he was leader of the NDP, said that minority government was a very good thing.

At the time he said it, the Liberals were trying to squeeze a majority out of the reluctant electorate of 1965, and Tommy Douglas was trying to stop them. Nevertheless — and putting his political motives aside — he was probably right.

Our cabinet ministers, trying to solve complex problems, turn for guidance to two general groups of people. On one side are the civil servants, skilled in the arts of advocacy, masters of the political labyrinth, and with detailed research and expert advice at their finger tips. On the other side are the MPs, the citizens' groups, the letter writers, and all the people with briefcases who wait in the outer offices trying to get a word in edgewise.

The civil servants think they are on the side of the people. They intend to be on the side of the people. But Ottawa is somehow a land of dreams — like Hollywood used to be.

The directors are up on the hill in the shade — calling instructions through megaphones. The people are below — working and paying the taxes — but they are regarded as supporting extras in the great extravaganza. They carry spears and run around in the dust — but they have no lines.

The stronger the government, the less need there is for the leaders to listen to their own backbenchers and the people they represent. The stronger the government, the more influential the civil servants become. The stronger the government, the more easily it is tempted to gamble with hastily conceived programs, and pet ideas.

In a minority government, the ministers continue to depend heavily on their experts in the civil service — as they should. But under such circumstances, the windows are open, and the shouts of the spear carriers disturb the serenity of the scene.

The American system of government is a structure of checks and balances — with the presidency, the congress, and the supreme court each having powers to control the other.

It is significant that in the Nixon landslide of 1972, the people did not give him control of Congress.

A recent Louis Harris survey says that by a 50-29 per cent margin, most Americans think it is better rather than worse to "have a Congress controlled by one party and the White House by another party." The reasons people gave for this decision varied around the theme — "Divided control keeps each branch of government in line."

Harris draws an interesting conclusion: "It is not an understatement to say that the original concept of the founding fathers in establishing such a system of checks by different branches of government has now been embraced by the people themselves, almost 200 years later, with a vengeance."

Many politicians moan about minority government, but maybe it's the only way to force the saw-offs that the various regions of Canada demand, and without which this country cannot work.

For under $100 we know of no other portable calculator that will give you office machine accuracy and convenience away from the office. The DIGI-MATIC 8 is the kind of personal-size calculator you've been waiting for. Fast, accurate, durable, attractive, the DIGI-MATIC 8 adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides and does mixed calculations anytime, anywhere. Instantly. Without any excuses. Here's why:

The incomparable DIGI-MATIC 8 is sold only by Simpsons Sears

Floating decimal
Some portable calculators have a fixed decimal. This leads to small errors when you multiply or divide using a few decimal places, gross errors when working with many decimal places. The DIGI-MATIC 8 has a floating decimal. Which means it doesn't round figures off to one or two decimals. The decimal point goes where it has to go to give you the correct answer.

Constant key
Special constant key permits continuous multiplication or division.

CE key
Say you're working to a final total through a long set of calculations. And you make a mistake on the last entry. The CE key allows you to clear the wrong entry and put in the correct one. There's no need to start all over from the beginning.

Portable power counts
Many portable calculators offer you only minutes of portable calculating time. The DIGI-MATIC 8 offers you up to 3 hours. You see, some other calculators use small throw-away batteries. Like some toys. But the DIGI-MATIC 8 is powered by rechargeable ni-cad batteries (recharger included). You simply plug it in and while you're using it, the DIGI-MATIC 8 is recharging itself.

More
- Credit balance function allows you to get a minus read-out
- 8 digit read-out is in full-view when in use on a flat surface
- Overflow indicator tells you when total contains more than 8 digits
- Tough ABS plastic case; measures 5¼"x3", total weight is just 10 ozs.
- Cord and plug unit for recharging and for normal office use
- Attractive carrying case
- 1 year guarantee

Salmon 'Smarter Than People'

NEW YORK (CP)—Salmon are smarter than most people think and deserve a better fate than ending up in a tin of a grocery store shelf, says a leading Canadian fish biologist.

Wilfred Carter, an authority on Atlantic salmon, has travelled the world to study the habits of fish in general.

He told a group of conservationists who have waged a long and successful fight to keep Atlantic salmon from becoming extinct that recent studies indicate that the game fish has definite built-in navigational aids.

The mysterious aids enable salmon to return to their same spawning grounds after years of growing up in deep ocean waters.

When man deciphers the navigational code of salmon, he will be able to help even further in conserving the species, Carter told the annual dinner of the Miramichi Salmon Association Friday night.

By knowing the habits of salmon, anti-pollution measures could be taken in the right places at the right time and the species would flourish again.

Carter is executive director of the International Atlantic Salmon Foundation, based in St. Andrews-By-The-Sea, N.B.

By piecing together intricate bits of scientific knowledge, fish biologists believe that salmon may be using a navigational code which is mathematical, electrical or chemical, or perhaps a combination of all three.

Carter said scientific reports indicate that salmon may be able to navigate by the stars, or follow the electro-magnetic impulses of the earth, or even smell out home waters, for a salmon's smell is expecially keen.

Salmon may recall certain odors from chemicals in their home fresh-water streams, Carter said. For this reason alone, he said, fighting pollution in streams where salmon spawn is important.

The biologist said he can understand the "frustrations" of commercial fishermen who cannot fish off the New Brunswick coast for six years. The moratorium on salmon fishing was proclaimed by the Canadian government last year.

But action had to be taken to prevent Atlantic salmon from disappearing because commercial fishermen were dangerously depleting the salmon.

Company Starts At Record Level

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Companies continue to be incorporated at a record rate in British Columbia, an indication of business optimism about the provincial economy.

A total of 820 companies were incorporated during January, a 28 per cent increase over the 639 incorporated the previous January.

In the last half of 1972 there were 725 companies incorporated in July, 748 in August, 693 in September, 694 in October, 751 in November and 701 in December.

These are British Columbia firms just starting up.

Meanwhile, the number of companies from outside British Columbia registering to do business in B.C. for the first time totalled 48 in January.

This is an 11.6 per cent increase over the 43 of the previous January.

There were 44 new societies formed in British Columbia during January compared with 32 a year ago, no co-operatives compared with a single co-op last January and 211 new partnerships were formed compared with 145 partnerships a year ago.

Statistics were released today by the office of the registrar of companies.

Rate of incorporation and registration of companies is considered to be a major index of provincial economic growth.

During 1972 there were 9,024 companies incorporated in the province, a 13.5 per cent increase over the 7,953 of 1971.

A total of 644 companies from outside the province registered to do business in British Columbia during 1972, a 12 per cent increase over the 575 in 1971.

The indicated rate of increase in January was higher than in the period immediately following the Aug. 30 provincial election.

In September, October and November of 1972 new companies were being incorporated at an increased rate of 6.6 per cent, compared with 28 per cent in January.

Meanwhile, proposed changes in the provincial companies act will bring The Bay company under jurisdiction of its regulations for the first time.

Historically The Bay has been exempt.

The present companies act says: "This act does not apply to the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay."

The new act, expected to pass next month and be proclaimed in October, specifically includes the Hudson's Bay under the terms of the act as a federal company.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 388-3551. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. I started a new business in 1972. Can you tell me what depreciation I can claim for income tax purposes?

A. Capital cost allowance, sometimes referred to as depreciation, is allowed as a deduction. The rates vary with the type of asset.

For example: Class 10—cars, trucks, etc., 30 per cent; Class 6—frame and stucco buildings, 10 per cent; Class 3—steel, brick and concrete buildings, 5 per cent.

Rates for other assets may be obtained by reference to the income tax regulations or from your local district taxation office. Special rates may apply to assets of a farmer or fisherman. For these, see the farmer's and fisherman's guide. In the case of a new business that was not in operation for the full taxation year, the depreciation should be pro-rated on the basis of the number of days the business was in operation.

Mountain State Now Reinstated

The Vancouver Stock Exchange has reinstated Mountain State Resources Ltd. to the oil section of the board after a brief suspension.

New underwritings include a purchase of 100,000 shares of Adonis Mines by Canarim Investment Corporation at 80 cents per share.

Canarim has also purchased 200,000 class A shares of Monterey Petroleum Corporation at 60 cents per share.

Armchair Comfort Planned

TORONTO (CP) — De Havilland Aircraft has planned armchair comfort for its first passengers on the short take-off and landing STOL service between Montreal and Ottawa next year.

The company has built six Twin Otters designed to attract "the briefcase trade" and will go into trial service with an 11-seat layout instead of the normal 20, with wider seats in a single row down each side of the airplane, says Robert McIntyre, the company's director of market development.

The low height of a Twin Otter cabin rules out stewardesses.

The federal ministry of transport announced the demonstration program in May, 1971, to be operated by Air Canada through a subsidiary, Air Transit. The aircraft will be deep orange with white markings.

De Havilland studies have shown that STOL flight time for the 103-mile route will be 75 minutes, compared with 120 minutes using conventional jet aircraft. The STOL's ability to take off and land in 2,000 feet means stolports can be closer to the core of the cities.

The steep approach angle of six degrees, compared with the conventional three degrees, means less noise under the airplane's flight path.

The Twin Otter, known to give a bumpy ride in rough weather, will be used until the company's proposed DHC-7 48-passenger quiet STOL airliner comes into production. The company holds a federal contract to develop the prototype DHC-7.

Locations for stolports have not been chosen yet but Rockcliffe Airport, four miles from downtown Ottawa, and a waterfront parking lot in Montreal have been suggested.

Company Fight Goes to Court

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gulf & Western Industries, Inc., and The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. filed suits Monday charging each other with violation of security laws.

In essence G & W wants A & P to stop making allegedly inaccurate statements about its tender offer of $20 a share for some 19 per cent of A & P stock while A & P wants G & W to cease pressing its offer.

A & P chairman William J. Kane urged in full-page newspaper ads Monday that stockholders hold on to their shares. He said that G & W a billion-dollar conglomerate, was trying to get the A & P stock for at least $4 a share less than its value.

Southam

Southam Press Ltd. reports net earnings of $13,856,000 or $1.11 a share for 1972 compared with $10,714,000 or 86¼ cents a share a year earlier.

In a report to shareholders, the company said income had risen in most sectors in 1972 and "there appears to be no reduction in the pace of business."

Revenue from operations for the year was $157,641,000 compared with $123,999,000 in 1971.

The interim report shows revenues from newspapers for the year of $98,527,000 compared with $76,287,000 for the previous year. Printing operations brought in $43,235,000 compared with $35,521,000 and trade publications and shows $15,879,000 compared with $12,191,000.

In the final quarter of 1972, the company reports net income of $4,140,000 or 33¼ cents a share, compared with $3,690,000 or 29½ cents in the comparative 1971 period.

Revenues in the final 1972 quarter totalled $43,462,000 compared with $36,593,000.

Candel

Candel Oil Ltd. reports net earnings of $2,999,000 or 72 cents a share for the year ending Dec. 31, 1972.

This compares with $3,199,000 or 77 cents a share the previous year. The decrease was attributed to increased expenses in operating, depletion and mineral and foreign exploraion categories.

Gross revenues of $9,316,000 were recorded last year, second highest in the company's history, compared with $9,237,000 in 1971.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. reports net earnings for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1972, of $16,107,000 or $2.69 a share, compared with $6,966,000 or $1.16 a share for the previous year. The company reported three-month earnings for the period ended Dec. 31, 1972, of $5,472,000, or 91 cents a share.

Company officials said 1972 earnings were the highest ever recorded by the company and sid the increase was largely due to the earnings of Gibraltar Mines Ltd., which began production during the year 25 miles north of Williams Lake in the Cariboo.

Officials said increased earnings from affiliated companies and reduced income taxes due to write-offs of exploration expenses from previous years also attributed to the gain in earnings.

Doman Buys Mainland Mill

DUNCAN — Doman Industries Ltd., which already has lumber storage and transportation facilities in Richmond, has purchased the Vancouver sawmill operation of Anderson Bros. Lumber Co. Ltd. located on the north arm of the Fraser River.

Company President Herb Doman said that the purchase, announced Monday, will be paid for with funds to be drawn down under the terms of Doman's first mortgage bond agreement. The sum was not made public but the purchase was for cash and no dilution is involved.

Doman Industries in the last fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1972, saw its net earnings increase from $1.02 per common share to $1.58 and working capital boosted from $3 million to $4.3 million.

Just last month the quarterly dividend was increased from 2.5 cents to 10 cents per common share.

The acquisition is the first step in the plans that Doman Industries has for it. Doman's lumber production capacity will increase by 35 million board feet to 175 million when the purchase date becomes effective, May 1. This total does not include the production of Saltair Lumber Co. Ltd. which is owned 80 per cent by Pacific Logging Co. Ltd. and 20 per cent by Doman's.

Doman stated that the existing Anderson mill will be updated for operation at full capacity while studies and engineering plans presently underway are being completed for a new sawmill to be built at the site.

The company feels, Doman said, that with the completion of the new sawmill in Vancouver early in 1974 and with the expansion underway at Doman's Chemainus plant, annual production capacity in 1974 will be 300 million board feet — double the present level.

Including the Saltair operation, the new capacity by 1974 will be 400 million board feet, Doman added.

'Age of Aquarius' Overtakes Bar

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

Lawyers are trying terribly hard to be relevant in the Age of Aquarius.

Only a few of the old waist coat and pinstripe set were in evidence at the mid-winter meeting of the British Columbia Bar Association held at Harrison Hot Springs over the weekend. Clutching whiskies they woodenly peered out from panelled corners as their younger colleagues animatedly discussed prepaid legal aid and computerized law.

It's also a buoyant bar at present. For the first time in 20 years the provincial government is seeking legal advice before draughting new legislation.

Prepared to live with mild socialism, yes. But whether the legal profession is willing to adjust its traditionally conservative ways in a fast-changing society is another question.

Concerned about heavy court backlogs, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald told the bar that a kind of legal ombudsman was needed to handle landlord tenant cases and small debt claims.

Para-lawyers are not exactly enshrined in the bar's pomp and circumstance and it would be interesting to see the status and range of activity afforded them by such a professional group.

But lawyers are moving in new directions. Taking a cue from medicine they are examining prepaid legal plans, inevitably dubbed "judicare."

Vancouver lawyer Sholto Hebenton — who describes himself as a civil libertarian who favored the War Measures Act — had a strong hand in preparing an interim report on various American prepaid plans.

Young and earnest, Hebenton has done much research on the relevancy of such plans to B.C. But whether the plans will become a reality is a moot point.

Once again, insurance schemes for the middle class are not exactly a tradition with "the second oldest profession in the world," as Alex Macdonald jokingly refers to the bar.

And Canadian Bar president L. P. deGrandpre, QC, is hesitant about the whole concept. He told me that if a prepaid legal plan was presented to the public tomorrow he is not convinced it would be utilized.

Lawyers are funny about the public. For the first time in its history the B.C. bar opened its meetings to the public — something for which the lawyers deserve real credit.

They even designated Vancouver lawyer Mike Hermann to explain things to any of the public who showed up.

"I have checked three times and no members of the public have asked to join us," Hermann told the chuckling provincial council meeting last Thursday.

"I guess it's pretty dull stuff," one lawyer said to the press as we rushed away to write first of a dozen or more stories.

Otherwise it was business as usual: criminal appeals, technical ramifications of no fault insurance, the Companies Act, something entitled "How to remunerate lawyers in which is included slicing the pie and of course dancing, swimming etc."

"Most of the people at this meeting are greedy lawyers not people lawyers," another lawyer said with sardonic humor at the provincial council meeting.

But when it comes to "dancing, swimming etc," lawyers drop their briefcases and plunge into Bacchanalia with wild abandon.

At 12:30 a.m. Friday the large Harrison pool was foaming with lawyers reveling in trying to pull each other's bathing-suits off. Oblivious to it all, two more stood at poolside discussing the intricacies of a motor-vehicle case.

The hotel wine steward said about 110 bottles of wine were sold on the first night of the meeting.

And how do they tip?

In one sense the whole meeting reminded me of a fraternity convention.

Frowning young actives running around organizing committees and panels. Indulgent old alumnae looking on with approval as the young fellows had a good time.

Or maybe it's a Bill Wilson says: Education is expensive. It's still largely the preserve of white Anglo-Saxon Protestants. Look around, these guys are all elitists.

Wilson is a third-year law student at UBC and the president of the UBC Student Law Society. He is also an Indian.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains A Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

TRADE TRAINING OPPORTUNITIES

Pre-apprenticeship Trade Training is offered by the Apprenticeship and Industrial Training Branch of the B.C. Department of Labour in the following trades:

B.C. Vocational School (Burnaby)
*Electronics
*Machinist
Sheet Metal Work

B.C. Vocational School (Dawson Creek)
*Carpentry and Joinery
*Cooking
*Heavy Duty Mechanics

B.C. Vocational School (Kelowna)
*Heavy Duty Mechanics

B.C. Vocational School (Nanaimo)
*Heavy Duty Mechanics
Logging (continuous intake — 6 week course)

B.C. Vocational School (Nelson - Prince George)
*Heavy Duty Mechanics

B.C. Vocational School (Terrace)
*Carpentry and Joinery
*Heavy Duty Mechanics

B.C. Vocational School (Victoria)
*Office Machine Mechanics (starting April 30, 1973)

Classes marked* will be six months and all other classes will be twenty-two weeks commencing April 2, 1973 unless otherwise indicated.

The training offered is designed to provide the trainee with a basic knowledge of the trade so that he will be more acceptable to employers as an apprentice.

Individuals accepted for training by the Apprenticeship and Industrial Training Branch of the B.C. Department of Labour will have all school costs paid. A subsistence allowance will also be provided plus one return fare to the school from the student's home.

Applicants who are over 16 years of age and have been out of school over one year should contact their local Canada Manpower office. Adults enrolled in a course by the Department of Manpower and Immigration will have training costs paid by Canada Manpower. Persons who qualify may also receive training allowances and transportation allowance.

Application forms and further information can be obtained from:

Zoning Bid Fails For 49 Apartments

A rezoning amendment to allow a 49-unit apartment block at 920 Arm St. in Esquimalt drew a barrage of criticism from nearby residents at a public meeting Monday.

The amendment, to change zoning of 1,695 square feet of land from two-family to multiple dwelling, was later defeated by Esquimalt council at a meeting in the municipal hall.

Former alderman John Gourlay led the protests against the proposed apartment block, accusing council of "leading the citizens down the multiple dwelling garden path" if it approved the rezoning. Already too many apartments are springing up in the area, he said.

"I can see ourselves just being forced out of our homes by these apartment buildings," said Vern Fillman of 815 Selkirk.

Fillman and several of his neighbors said they'd rather see the whole block rezoned to multiple dwelling than just one small piece of land at 920 Arm St.

"I don't see what the municipality of Esquimalt has to gain by allowing such a density of dwelling," said Gerald Gordon, 1034 Gosper Crescent.

Developer Vagn Sorensen said the apartment block can go ahead even with the bylaw amendment defeated.

Sorensen already has two parcels of land, one zoned multiple dwelling 15 years ago, the other zoned multiple dwelling two years ago. With these, he said, he could still build a slightly smaller block than originally planned.

Another zoning bylaw amendment discussed at the public hearing got no action from council, which preferred "putting off the agony another two weeks," as Mayor Art Young put it.

Developer R. J. Annett has applied for rezoning of five lots betwen 927-35 Esquimalt Rd. to multiple dwelling from commercial. The zoning amendment also changes to multiple dwelling two adjacent lots, occupied by two small businesses.

Both businessmen affected, Blake Sprague and Ralph Wherry, opposed their property being zoned to multiple dwelling.

A zoning bylaw amendment saying all commercial buildings on Esquimalt Road must be set 10 feet from the property line instead of five feet was approved with no discussion by council.

The same amendment makes requirements for parallel parking units 22 feet long instead of 18 feet.

NEIGHBORS SPLIT ON BOAT SHELTER

A neighbor's spirited objection to a temporary boat-building shelter at 1813 Jade Place carried more weight than a 12-name petition at Saanich council Monday.

Although the plastic-covered structure at the home of F. M. Rose contravenes a bylaw, the municipal building department was prepared to allow it to stand until Oct. 31, after which time the owner could expect to have action taken.

Council was told 12 neighbors petitioned to allow the shelter to remain temporarily.

But R. G. Horton, next door at 1809 Jade, said he did not sign a petition and was "strongly opposed" to the shelter standing on his property line. It devalues the property and made it "look like an industrial area," Horton complained.

He said he foresaw the boat-building project lasting four years rather than nine months and expected there would be a lot of noise meanwhile. Only the keel had been laid, Horton said.

Aldermen were told no permit had been granted and that before the petition was received, the owner was ordered to have the shelter removed.

"I don't intend to intimidate the mayor or members of council, but I am prepared to take legal advice and court action," Horton said.

Aldermen were about to endorse the recommendation to permit temporary use when Ald. Leslie Passmore cited a number of other latent bylaw violations involving such things as old car bodies and unsightly premises.

He said he had seen the shelter and found it unsightly, "at least 14 feet high," and felt council had to support the bylaw.

Ald. Alan Newberry said if the bylaw was violated council had to oppose the shelter.

Horton pointed out the structure was 48 feet long, 12 feet wide and 26 feet high.

Alderman's Survey: Apartments Unwanted

Ald. Shirley Dowell told Oak Bay council Monday night she surveyed homes in the area from Willows to Uplands Park and Estevan to Beach Drive and found most owners don't want apartments built there.

The area has been zoned for apartments since 1927 and council is considering a bylaw that will restrict height of apartment buildings, increase setbacks and tighten up other requirements.

Ald. Dowell said 12 homeowners said they would like their property rezoned back to single-family and another 11 said they would be willing to sell their property to the municipality eventually if this would stop the encroachment of apartments.

Mrs. Dowell recommended that council proceed with the bylaw immediately "as it stands with no more concessions to developers."

Esquimalt Marina Hits Snag

The proposed $1.2 million marina development near Work Point Barracks ran into rough sailing at Monday's Esquimalt council meeting.

Ald. Arthur Mebs, chairman of the planning, zoning and housing sub-committee, that approved zoning changes for the marina last week, defended the project.

Ald. Terry Prentice and Mayor Art Young had their doubts.

"What we'll end up with is a four-storey hotel on the waterfront with a cocktail lounge," Prentice suggested.

Developer John Melnyck has asked for changes in the marina bylaw to allow him to include a cocktail lounge, laundromat, and 28 "boatel" units in the proposed West Bay Marina.

Prentice said Melnyck's was the third marina proposal Esquimalt had seen. The others had failed, he said.

"We really don't know if this proposal is viable or not," said Young.

He said he wouldn't like to see the bylaw amendment passed until council had some guarantee on adequate parking for the marina.

Council sent the amendment back to the planning, zoning and housing sub-committee.

Council is preparing for some rough sailing of its own when it passes the first increases in business licence fees in Esquimalt in nine years.

"I think we're liable to get a little static on this," said Young. "I would hope we don't wait another nine years before we upgrade them again."

Some of the fees will be going up 100 per cent, 200 per cent of more. The fee for the bulk oil plant of Imperial Oil Co. Ltd. will be increased from $200 to $1,000.

Council could not agree whether groups of professionals, such as doctors working out of one office, or a firm of lawyers, should be charged one licence fee for all, or one for each professional..

The fee proposals were referred to the municipality's solicitor for clarification of this point.

In other business council:

—Agreed to hold a byelection Feb. 26 to fill the seat of the late Ald. Arthur Cuthbert.

—Approved a bylaw amendment allowing members of the Esquimalt Municipal Sports Centre Commission to sit on the commission only two terms in a row. Four long-time members of the seven-man commission are affected by the amendment.

—Gave permission for an Easter Seal "Bunny Tag" day Saturday, April 14, in Esquimalt.

Another Baseball Strike? Owners May Not Care

By SHIRLEY POVICH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The major league baseball athletes now want more money for their pension fund and are making tough talk about another players' strike. The miserly club owners cut them off last year with a $400,000 increase in the annual $5.4 million contribution to their retirement years, and the athletes say there will be no cheap settlement this time.

They're not saying they won't answer the bell for spring training. Their artful labor consultant, Marvin Miller, wouldn't counsel anything like that.

The idea is to hit the owners hard with a strike just before deadline, the opening of the season, as they did last year when, after a 13-day walkout, they got more pension money, if not quite enough according to their lights.

There are abundant signs the owners won't scare as easily this year. A group of them has even suggested that no training camps be opened until there is a settlement. If this happens, Marvin Miller is certain to scream "Lockout!" and say he is taking the players' case to the national Labor Relations Board again, or to court. This threat could leave a great many of the club owners indifferent.

The athletes may have picked the wrong year for talk of a strike. In these recent seasons, the baseball business has not been highly profitable. The latest symptom of the game's malaise was the sale last month of the New York Yankees' franchise for a mere $10 million, a clearance-sale figure for the oldest team in the nation's biggest city, with the glorious Yankee heritage, in the nation's No. 1 television market.

The Yankees fetched $200,000 less than the $10.2 million paid five years ago for the expansion franchise of the San Diego Padres, hemmed in on the west by the Pacific Ocean, on the east by the desert, on the north by Disneyland, and on the south by Mexico.

Only four of the 12 teams in the American League showed a profit last season despite the close, ding-dong finish in the A.L. East. These were Detroit, Boston, Oakland and the White Sox. The others finished in the red because of the pincer effects of skyrocketing player salaries and drooping attendance figures.

The American League only a fortnight ago abandoned all pretence that there was nothing wrong with its game. In an effort to generate more excitement in baseball and bring more fans to the park, the A.L. conceded its game may be getting dull and boldly defied the hoary tradition that says you can't change the rules. It braved the dislocation of all those batting records by accepting a designated hitter who would bat instead of the pitcher at all times.

From Chicago's north side, of all places, has come the latest bleat from a baseball club owner. Phil Wrigley, who owns the Chicago Cubs in addition to all that chewing gum, finally registered some pain at the continued red ink that has been splotching his baseball holdings, a miniscule part of his empire.

Wrigley told Jerry Holtzman, the eminent Chicago baseball writer, that the Cubs' balance sheet for 1972 showed a $161,336 deficit, "but the actual loss on our baseball operation was $290,000."

Wrigley used Steve Carlton of the Phillies to cite the salary spiral and its effect on all teams.

"I see Carlton signed for something like $165,000," the chewing gum tycoon said, implying it would be very sticky when the Cubs sought to sign some of their own players.

When the players threatened to strike last year, Frank Cashen, Baltimore Orioles' player personnel director, was maintaining a calm, saying it might not cost Jerold Hoffberger, the Orioles' owner, anything to close shop.

"If the Orioles don't get into the playoffs and the World Series," Cashen said, "we figure to lose $600,000 on the season. If we don't operate at all, our losses will be about the same—$600,000."

This recalls Toots Shor's arithmetic. Several years ago, when the New Yorker's profitable 51st Street restaurant was encountering a drop in business on Sundays, his auditor recommended a change in operations.

"He told me that if the place stayed closed on Sundays, it would save me $500," Shor said. "I asked him how about staying closed seven days a week and saving $3,500."

Curling: A Strong Rink With Strong Brooms

NANAIMO — The best rink easily won the Pacific Consols here on the weekend, and many curling observers now feel that the Jack Tucker foursome should have a good shot at the Brier in Edmonton next month. And why not? All signs say "go".

Providing always, of course, that the PCCA champ can get by the B.C. Curling Association representative in a best-of-three playoff at Nelson this weekend.

Tucker himself curled extremely well, and so did his third, Bernie Sparks. Not only that, but they worked well as a unit, and long deliberations over what shot to call were rare indeed.

Up front, the combination of lead Gerry Peckham, and former Esquimalt High skip, Jim Armstrong, was steady throughout, and probably provided the strongest brooms of all the rinks.

And sweeping definitely was a big plus for the Tucker group as Sparkes, a former second with Brier champ Ron Northcott, can also dust a stone with anybody.

For Tucker, it would be a second chance at the Brier. He was a third with Richmond's Bob McCubbin in 1968. That rink had a 5-5 record in Kelowna.

Sparkes has been there five times, last year as the B.C. skip with the Giles brothers. He had a 5-5 mark as well.

Admiration for the Loser

This year? Tucker said: "I feel I have a good, strong rink, and I thought we were curling better at the finish than we had been earlier."

Tucker came through the back door in the Zone Two playoffs. He lost to Bob Shienbein in "A", then defeated Shienbein the second time around in "B". Up here, the only close call he had was in the first game against Vancouver's Gene Kraus. And Kraus lost his chance for a possible upset by missing his last two rocks when he was one up coming home. Kraus had scored a three on the 11th end, and that was the only time any rink scored more than two against the personable Richmond skip. Mostly he kept a tidy house.

Thirteen years a flyer, now a jet pilot with Canadian Pacific Airlines, Tucker has one nagging problem.

"It's my back," he admitted. "It still bothers me at times, but not as much as it did when I played third. That's why I became a skip. I couldn't stand the sweeping."

And when he became a skip, he left his former leader, Glen Pierce, whom he defeated in the final game here.

"Psychologically, the game was tough," he explained of his seemingly easy win. "I admire Glen so much."

But this wasn't Pierce's day or playoff. If he curled badly himself at times, he didn't have nearly as strong a rink in front of him as Tucker, and it was only his gutsy determination that got him through a couple of earlier games when it seemed he must lose.

Amid Controversy and Confusion

It was interesting, too, watching some of the curlers trying to adapt to the new sliding rule, and not always being within the law either.

Tucker appeared more aware of the possibility of fouling than some of the others by stopping before the hog line. But at times his hand rested on the line and, as the rule reads, that is not legal. Armstrong, too, didn't always come to a complete stop, before stepping over the line. And if that rule is enforced at Edmonton in the Brier, this carelessness could hurt a rink's chances.

The intent of the rule is that a curler release the rock before he reaches the hog line; but the way it is worded, the curler must stop too. And just what constitutes a "full stop" is the fine print that must be determined, and made clear to everyone.

It has been a bone of hot contention on the prairies all winter long, and probably will remain so right up until Brier time when a clear decision on how to call the rule will have to be made.

It is still unclear in the minds of many, mostly uncalled, and never here on the weekend.

And that only adds to the confusion.

But foul-line judges for the Brier?

The purists may not like it, but if this rule is a rule, it could be.

NANAIMO CURLERS EARN OPENING SPLIT

PRINCE GEORGE — Karen Kaese's Nanaimo rink won and lost in its first two matches of the B.C. women's curling finals Monday.

The Kaese rink of Donna Dunn, Loretta Ahlstrom and Shannon Blackburn, winner of the coastal division, defeated Mary Skaros of Oliver 10-2 in the first round of the six-rink, round-robin playoff.

In the second round, however, the Kaese quartet conceded to Mickey Russell of Fort St. John after falling behind 10-1 at six ends.

In today's windup, Mrs. Kaese meets Mona MacLean of Whitehorse, Elaine Furnseth of Terrace and Marg Van Yzerloo of Castlegar.

In other matches yesterday, Mrs. Russell downed Mrs. Furnseth 9-6, Mrs. Skaros beat Mrs. Van Yzerloo 8-7, Mrs. MacLean defeated Mrs. Furnseth 11-5 and Mrs. Van Yzerloo beat Mrs. MacLean 14-6

If there is a tie after today's round-robin, a playoff will be held Wednesday.

Scorpions Must Play Vancouver All-Stars

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

It's a good thing Victoria Scorpions didn't hold their breath this season waiting for a rule change prohibiting all-star teams from entering Senior "A" basketball playoffs. They wouldn't have survived beyond Christmas.

The rules were changed, all right, but the legislators left a loophole big enough to march an entire league through. And that's exactly what the Vancouver Dogwood Basketball Association did.

To stop leagues from forming all-star teams for Canadian Amateur Basketball Association playdowns — thus giving individual clubs like Scorpions a chance — the CABA ruled that every team must register five players by Dec. 15 and the rest by Jan. 20.

The four-team Dogwood Association, Scorpions' opponents in a best-of-three B.C. senior "A" final starting Feb. 17 in Victoria, got around that one with ingenious simplicity.

They registered all 60 players in the league, neglecting to mention their clubs.

Admittedly it was a little expensive at $44.50 a man registration fee, but the result is that the Dogwood circuit now can put together an all-star team against Scorpions and it's all perfectly legal.

Plans call for the Dogwood champion, either Vancouver Capilanos or Surrey Broncos, to meet Scorpions. But the Vancouver club can drop as many of its own players as it wishes with no limit on the number of pickups.

Caps and Surrey are tied 2-2 in a best-of-five final with the deciding contest Sunday.

You might think Scorpions are ready to protest the whole affair, but not so. This is because the Dogwood Association didn't contest Victoria's entry into the playoffs despite another CABA ruling requiring playdown contenders to compete in league schedules.

Scorpions couldn't get into the Dogwood Association and are playing exhibitions instead, including a pair this weekend against Richmond Roadrunners if gym space is available in Victoria. A maintenance strike has closed the team's regular home court at Central Junior High School.

In any case, Dave Henson, a rugby player who formed Scorpions last summer, feels his club is strong enough to beat the Dogwood Selects.

Henson's wife, Pam, played last season for University of Victoria Vikettes when they won the Canadian women's title. Dave got a chance to see men's Senior "A" playoffs and that gave him the idea to put a team together. He lined up Bob Burrows as playing coach and several top amateur players were recruited, including Bill Robinson.

Robinson, a 5-10 guard, joined the team a month ago after four years with Simon Fraser. A native of Chemainus, he's back in his home town working as a longshoreman and completing a history and English degree by correspondence.

Robinson, 21, who earned All-American honorable mention at SFU, is averaging nearly 25 points a game through excellent outside shooting and superb ball handling.

Scorpions, meanwhile, are among the highest scoring teams in Canada.

"We were averaging 98 points a game," said Henson, who serves as general manager, "but that dropped to about 94 with last weekend's loss." Scorpions dropped a 97-80 decision to Tacoma Plywood.

Other regulars with Scorpions include Walt and Don Burrows, Dave Mulcahy, John Lauvaas, Gord Hoshal, Barry Burch, Brian Brumwell, Ollie Moilanen, Al Glove and Tom Child.

Dates for the Scorpion-Dogwood series are Feb. 17, in Victoria, Feb. 24 in Vancouver and Feb. 25, if necessary, in Vancouver. Winner advances to the Canadian Senior "A" championship tournament in Halifax March 9-11.

Faulkner Latest To Leave Cougars

EDMONTON — It won't shake the world, but Victoria Cougars will miss the Western Canada Junior Hockey League playoffs this season.

Mathematical elimination was accomplished Monday night when Edmonton Oil Kings tagged the Cougars with a 10-5 defeat here before 2,031 fans.

However, there was one startling development concerning the Cougars — centre Dave Faulkner's departure from the team. The 17-year-old, who had been tagged as one of the most promising prospects on the Cougars became the third player in the past week to leave the club.

Coach Bob Briscoe, admitting Faulkner had great potential, said the Cougars probably will deal him to another team.

"We won't have any trouble making a deal," said general manager Eric Bishop.

Faulkner was the Cougars' second highest scorer with 21 goals and 28 assists. However, he had scored only three goals and had four assists since the new year.

Don Williams and Cark Cureatuz both left the club last week.

Faulkner's walkout allowed Terry Ewasiuk to accompany Cougars on their current three-game swing into Alberta. Still hampered by a painful hip bruise, Ewasiuk played sparingly and contributed to the first of Cougars' five goals on Monday.

Ed Boucha, the recently-converted defenceman, scored Victoria's final two goals to earn the Cats a small degree of respectability in a game that stretched the team's losing streak to 11. Boucha's goals gave him seven in the last four games as a winger.

Don Dzaidyk and Brad Richardson scored Victoria's other goals.

Centre John Rogers scored three times for Edmonton and Darcy Rota added a pair. Both Edmonton leaders connected once while killing penalties.

Oil Kings took a 2-1 lead after the first period, but Cougars collapsed to allow Edmont to freewheel into a 7-2 lead in the second. It was all over but for the shouting at that point.

"They let down," said Briscoe. "It was the poorest defensive effort they've given us."

Ramblers Ride Streak to Top

Mt. Douglas Ramblers stepped into a share of first place in the Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League Monday and ran a winning streak to six games by defeating Esquimalt Dockettes, 38-20.

The unbeaten Ramblers are now tied with idle Belmont Tomahawks, who have played two more games.

Gail Gummer pumped in 10 points to pace Mount View. Janice Turner was high scorer for Reynolds with seven points.

Marg Mainwaring counted 13 points to provide all the scoring required by Oak Bay.

All three games, postponed since Jan. 12, were played in the Henderson Park gymnasium.

Two Colts and Lion Make Hall of Fame

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Raymond Berry and Jim Parker, superstars in a victorious Baltimore Colts era, were named to the U.S. Pro Football's Hall of Fame today along with Joe Schmidt, former Detroit Lions linebacker.

Selections were announced by Dick Gallagher, director of the shrine who said the three inductees represent the smallest number named in any year since the hall was initiated in 1963.

Berry, onetime wide receiver, set a National Football League record with 631 career pass receptions, a mark broken during the 1972 season by Don Maynard of New York Jets.

JOE SCHMIDT
. . . all-pro eight times

The 275-pound Parker, generally considered a prototype for interior offensive linemen, was the heart of Baltimore's offensive line when John Unitas was firing the ball to Berry in the 1950s and early 1960s.

Schmidt "quarterbacked" the Detroit defence from middle linebacker, making all-pro eight times and eventually being named head coach of the Lions.

Oddly, Schmidt resigned his coaching job a month ago and his replacement, Don McCafferty, named Berry as his first assistant coach.

Calgary Girl Ski Winner

ASPEN, Colo. (CP) — Carolyn Oughton of Calgary produced a brilliant personal performance Monday to win the final downhill event of Roche Cup competition in the Can-Am ski tour.

With a time of one minute, 10:52 seconds, she nipped Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., by one-hundredth of a second.

Rule Adopted By Coast Loop

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Pacific Coast League will follow the American League in adopting the designated-hitter rule for the 1973 baseball season, league president William McKeachnie said Monday.

KEINO MAKES DECISION: NOW HE'LL RUN FOR KIP

NEW YORK (AP) — Kip Keino, Kenya's famed distance runner, did a sudden turnaround Monday and signed a professional track contract which he admitted "will cause shock in Nairobi."

The International Track Association (ITA) signed the Olympic steeplechase champion to a three-year deal, and Keino then departed for his home in Africa.

"I'm pretty sure I will lose my job, and my home, because of this decision," the 33-year-old Keino said. "I asked my superiors before if it would be okay for me to turn pro. They said no."

Keino said Friday in Toronto he would not run for money.

Keino said that since coming to North America for a series of events he had refused ITA president Mike O'Hara's bids in Los Angeles, Albuquerque, San Francisco and Toronto. O'Hara visited Keino in Nairobi last fall.

Then, O'Hara gave it one final shot.

"He asked if I could spare a half-hour at the airport," Keino said. "I said okay and we had a long discussion. I finally decided that, after running for my country for many years, I would now run for Kip."

Neither Keino nor O'Hara would disclose the financial arrangement, but it was reported in Nairobi last week that a $4,800 bonus had been offered.

Keino's occupation has been as chief physical education officer for the Kenyan Police College in Kijango. His salary was nominal, but living quarters were provided for his family that includes six children.

Keino said he had no plans to become a permanent resident of the U.S. "I will base myself in Los Angeles and go home after a few months," he said.

Keino won the 1,500-metre run at the 1968 Olympic Games and took the 3,000-metre steeplechase at the 1972 games in Munich.

IN HOSPITAL with acute respiratory infection is Rick Martin, who has scored 28 goals for Buffalo Sabres this season in National Hockey League. His condition is listed as satisfactory.

English Cup Draw Favors Teams in First Division

LONDON (Reuter) — The draw for the fifth round of the English Football Association Cup competition made Monday favored the First Division teams.

Only Carlisle United of the four Second-Division teams who put out First Division clubs last Saturday have drawn a home tie in the next round to be played Feb. 24.

Carlisle will play Arsenal, one of the favorites for the cup and finalist for the last two years. The two clubs last clashed in the cup in 1951, when Carlisle caused a shock by drawing in London before crashing 4-1 in the replay on their own ground.

Milwall, the London "giant-killers" who toppled Everton Saturday, have to travel again to play Wolverhampton Wanderers, who are eighth in the First Division.

Luton, shock winners at Newcastle in the previous round, will be away to the winners of the Bolton and Cardiff replay. The task should not be beyond them as they have the best away record of any side in English football.

Hull City, the other Second-Division cup heroes who knocked out West Ham Saturday, face a difficult task with an away match against First Division Coventry City.

Leeds United, the cup holders, are at home to West Bromwich Albion in an all-First-Division clash.

Winners of the replay between Liverpool and Manchester City at Manchester Wednesday will have a home tie against either Sunderland or Reading which should mean a fairly comfortable passage into the quarters.

There will be two London "derby" games if Tottenham and Crystal Palace win midweek replays. Tottenham will be at home to Queen's Park Rangers if they overcome Derby Wednesday, and Palace could win themselves a home tie against Chelsea by beating Sheffield Wednesday.

The draw (home teams listed first):

Liverpool or Manchester City vs. Sunderland or Reading; Bolton Wanderers or Cardiff City vs. Luton Town; Leeds United vs. West Bromwich Albion; Carlisle United vs. Arsenal; Coventry City vs. Hull City; Wolverhampton Wanderers vs. Millwall; Derby County or Tottenham Hotspur vs. Queen's Park Rangers; Sheffield Wednesday or Crystal Palace vs. Chelsea.

Hockey Anyone?

All parents of boys living on the Saanich Peninsula north of Royal Oak interested in forming a minor hockey association are asked to meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Keating School on Central Saanich Road.

HIBS PLAY RANGERS

GLASGOW (Reuter) — Glasgow Rangers, leaders in the First Division of the Scottish football league, and Hibernian, who are third in the table, were paired Monday in the draw for the fourth round of the Scottish F.A. Cup.

Rangers will be at home for the tie, to be played Feb. 24.

Hibernian beat Rangers 2-0 in a cup semi-final replay last season, but lost to Celtic in the final.

Celtic, who have won the Scottish Cup a record 22 times have an away tie against Motherwell.

The draw (home teams first):

Ayr United vs. Abroath or Stirling Albion; Dumbarton vs. Partick Thistle; Aberdeen vs. Falkirk; Clyde or Montrose vs. Hamilton Academicals; Motherwell vs. Celtic; Rangers vs. Hibernian; Kilmarnock vs. Airdrieonians or Hearts; St. Johnstone or Stranraer vs. Dundee.

Crusaders Pad Lead By Stopping Cougars

By The Canadian Press

Cleveland coach Bill Needham admitted Monday night's World Hockey Association game wasn't an artistic success, but his Crusaders were willing to take the two points anyhow.

The Crusaders used the freewheeling Chicago Cougars to solidify their lead atop the Eastern Division with a 7-5 victory, in front of 2,673 Cleveland fans.

"This was two big points," Needham admitted after the game in which the Cougars took the lead 40 seconds into the first period.

"But after that first quick goal, the guys realized they had better start skating and we got going."

In the only other game, Houston Aeros lost a chance to close the gap on Western Division-leading Winnipeg Jets when they lost a 6-3 game at home to Minnesota Fighting Saints.

Garry Jarrett and Jim Wiste were two-goal scorers for the Crusaders, the others going to Ted Hodgson, Doug Brindley and Ron Buchanan. Rosaire Paiement, with two, Dan Lodboa, Bob Sicinski and Rick Morris tallied for Chicago.

Minnesota grabbed an early lead with Frank Sanders, George Morrison and Len Lilyholm scoring in the first period which proved the difference with each club sharing the scoring in the other two periods.

Bill Young, Mike McMahon and Jimmy Jonson scored the other Saints goals as 3,119 Houston fans looked on. Don Grierson, Ted Taylor and Duke Harris replied for the Aeros.

CHICAGO (5) — Rosaire Paiement 2, Rick Morris, Dan Lodboa, Bob Sicinski. CLEVELAND (7) — Gary Jarrett 2, Jim Wiste 2, Ted Hodgson, Doug Brindley, Ron Buchanan. Attendance — 2673.

MINNESOTA (6) — Frank Sanders, Bill Young, Mike McMahon, Jim Johnson, George Morrison, Len Lilyholm. HOUSTON (3) — Hal Grierson, Ted Taylor, Duke Harris.

Rebels Grey Blank Tigers

Jim Sherlock recorded his seventh shutout of the season Sunday as Rebels Grey topped Tigers 3-0 to take over first place in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association.

In other games, University of Victoria Vikings picked up four points by defeating Castaways 3-1 and collecting a win by default over Orangemen while Rebels Red battled to a 2-2 deadlock with Fossils.

Bucks Clipped

Lake Cowichan Lakers of the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey League outscored Ingraham Buckaroos of the Victoria Intermediate League 3-1 in the final period Monday on the way to a 7-4 exhibition victory at Memorial Arena.

Lakers led 3-1 after the first period but Buckaroos closed the gap to 4-3 going into the final 20 minutes.

Gene Legare, Bob Bayes, Dave Hill, Doug Janna, Wayne Davidson, Rod Hunter and Rick Boyd scored for the well-balanced Lakers. John Vassos scored twice for Buckaroos while singles were added by John Humphries and Rick Hamilton.

Liz-Ann a Winner

Silverware eluded most of Victoria's representatives as a number of competitions wrapped up the second annual B.C. Festival of Winter Sports program at the weekend.

Mike Epstein beat former Victorian Dave Sorenson, also of Vancouver, 15-8, 18-17 for the men's title.

Maureen Hibberson and Jean Wescott of Victoria lost to Miss Henry and Sue Turscott of Vancouver in the women's doubles final, 15-9, 18-13.

Saanich Braves reached to final of the Vernon Winter Carnival pee wee hockey tournament but were defeated 4-2 by Vernon. Riley Park of Vancouver downed Jasper 6-1 to capture the "B" title.

Don Warren of Haney won the men's title and former world-champion Dorothy Lidstone of Richmond captured the distaff crown at the B.C. indoor archery championships in Vancouver.

Mrs. Lidstone defeated Wanda Allen of victoria and Bea Boorman of Haney to take the women's freestyle event.

Debbie Massie finished first in the 11 and 12-year-old figures while clubmate Penny North placed second. Elizabeth Rhoades won the 15-and-over solos competition and placed second in the 15-and-over figures while Barbara Rhoades was second in the 13-and-14 solos. The Roades girls also won the 15-and-over duets and were on the squad with Miss Massie, Sharlene Patterson and Noel Gray that finished second in the 15-and-over team competition.

Esquimalt Speed Skating Club finished fourth in the provincial outdoors championships at Dawson Creek. David Shields finished second over-all in the junior men's competition while clubmate Stewart Kennedy tied for second in the midget boys' section. Brenda Shields placed third among bantam girls.

625 Years For Murders

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Juan V. Corona has begun serving 25 consecutive life prison terms for the slaughter of 25 itinerant farm workers found buried two years ago in peach orchards along the Feather River.

The 38-year-old Mexican national was sentenced Monday by Superior Court Judge Richard Patton while a crowd of about 250 young Mexican-Americans demonstrated in support of Corona outside the courthouse. One demonstrator was arrested for malicious mischief.

The judge pronounced sentence in the largest mass murder trial in U.S. history after rejecting a defence motion for a new trial based on charges of jury tampering—involving a conversation between a sheriff's matron and a juror the night before Corona was convicted.

Patton also had defence lawyer Richard Hawk arrested in the courtroom. The judge ordered him to begin serving immediately 54 days of a total of 74 days in jail for contempt-of-court citations issued during the four-month trial.

Two prosecutors face seven-day sentences, which they were given time to appeal. All three lawyers were cited for violating the judge's instructions that they not discuss any aspects of the case outside the courtroom.

PAROLE

Special prosecutor Ronald Fahey said the effect of making the life terms consecutive, rather than concurrent, would be to delay Corona's eligibility for parole probably beyond his lifetime.

Corona, the father of four small daughters, has been behind bars since early in May 26, 1971, when sheriff's deputies began unearthing body after body in peach orchards near Yuba City, about 45 miles north of Sacramento.

Hundreds Aid School Vote

Hundreds of parents are manning phones asking other parents to vote yes in the Feb. 12 $1,664,900 school construction referendum.

They're part of Greater Victoria School Board's massive campaign to generate support for what chairman Peter Bunn calls a mini-referendum."

"I've even written to all the barbers in town saying that, as traditional sources of community information, we'd like them to be well informed on the referendum," community relations officer Bill Stavdal said.

He said each of district's 54 schools has set up phoning committees, with as many as 75 parents, to phone other parents and ask for their support.

Information pamphlets, costing about $1,000, have been sent home with every school student, Stavdal said, and advertisements will be placed in newspapers and over the radio.

Student councils will also be approached, he said, and asked to participate in some way, perhaps by offering babysitting services to voters.

On Monday, board spokesmen expressed some concern that the maintenance workers strike might hamper the success of the vote.

The referendum asks ratepayers to approve the spending of nearly $1.7 million for nine school projects.

The projects mostly involve fire safety in science laboratories as well as more complete burglar alarm systems in schools.

The safety programs are the result of recommendations made in a 1969 study of the B.C. Research Council into school laboratory safety.

"We followed up on all the recommendations we could afford to, such as chemical storage and other precautionary arrangements," Bunn said. "But some safety features cost money we can't afford without a referendum."

Refegendum money will also go to expanding three library facilities and providing six classrooms at James Bay elementary.

The additions to James Bay school are part of an over-all plan to phase out South Park elementary leaving the old building to be used as a full-time community school.

"The whole concept of community schools collapses if the referendum doesn't go through," Bunn said.

Board spokesmen described the referendum as a "tidying up" vote, clearing the way for a new five-year plan of school construction, according to new budget regulations set up by the NDP government.

The referendum needs 60 per cent approval.

BARRETT SAYS DAVIS GREAT GANDY-DANCER

Premier Dave Barrett has again lashed into federal Environment Minister Jack Davis for remarks Davis made Monday about establishment of a coal port in the Squamish area.

Barrett this time called Davis "the greatest gandy-dancer outside the subcontinent" for apparently telling the annual convention of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union that his department was responsible for stopping the port development at Squamish.

Barrett said the statement obviously came from a politician who has been spinning on this tippy-toes for so long that he can't remember what direction he started out on, let alone what started him spinning.

"He's unbelievable."

Davis told the fishermen's convention that the environment department would protect B.C. estuaries. He also said his department had headed off construction of a bulk loading terminal at Flora Bank at the mouth of the Skeena River and "stopped B.C. Rail from paving over the remaining half of the delta at Squamish."

The two men last clashed in December when Barrett accused Davis of misrepresenting Barrett's feelings about locating the coal port at Squamish. At that time Barrett called Davis "persona non grata" in B.C. and said he would never speak to him again unless it was in the presence of reporters.

Barrett announced last week that the government is cancelling plans to develop a port at Squamish and is looking instead at an alternate site at Britannia Beach, seven miles closer to Vancouver along Howe Sound.

Civil Service Up by 1,471

The B.C. civil service increased in size by 1,471 employees during 1972, says the Civil Service Commission's annual report, filed Monday in the legislature.

On Dec. 31, 1972, there were 30,612 employees, up from 29,141 on the same day a year before.

The turnover rate for the year was 16.3 per cent, with 2,803 people leaving permanent positions. This was up from the 1971 record low of 14.3 per cent turnover, but still below the 10-year average of 17.2 per cent.

The civil service is divided into 16,351 permanent employees and 14,261 temporary employees, most of whom are employed on a continuous basis, the report said.

Tax Relief Would Offset North Living, Says NDPer

NDP backbencher Douglas Kelly of Omineca urged the government Monday to provide tax relief for people who live in the north and to make gasoline prices uniform throughout the province so that northern people are not discriminated against.

Kelly said northern people have to put up with many hardships in day-to-day living, including sub-standard wages, costly fuel, food and gasoline, lack of cultural entertainment and essential services, and also poor housing.

The freshman MLA said the government could give special financial consideration to northerners by lowering their income taxes.

After all, he said, these people are helping to keep the province's productivity at a high level and are having to put with an often-uncomfortable climate.

Kelly also urged a special housing program saying many cannot now obtain CMHC loans because they do not make enough money.

RESTRICT HUNTING

He said non-resident hunters should not be allowed to hunt game and that hunting from snowmobiles should not be allowed. The Fish and Wildlife Branch could also do with more conservation officers, he said.

Kelly also criticized enforcement of forest management licences in the north, saying some large forest companies are not living up to their tree-farm contracts and are wasting valuable timber.

Chris D'Arcy, (NDP Rossland-Trail) said there should be controls on foreign ownership of land in B.C. He said more than 250 square miles of private property in the Rossland-Trail area are fenced off from the public. The land is owned, he said, by four companies whose headquarters are in the tiny European country of Lichtenstein.

It is customary, D'Arcy said, that the public have access to privately-held lands with owner's consent as long as industrial operations are not interfered with and vandalism is kept down. But these companies are not allowing the public on to their land, he said. "This countryside has to be saved for ourselves and for our ancestors," he said.

Musical Art Showcase Scheduled

Vocal numbers will be by Judy Johnson and Brian Benn in solo groups; a duet by Susan Pye and Russell Proudman and a junior girls' ensemble.

More Defence Funds

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1973-74 defence department budget will receive its first major increase in several years, Defence Minister James Richardson said in the Commons Monday.

Slipping several attempts to discover the size of the increase, the minister said most of the increase will be for new equipment. The 1972-73 budget was $1.93 billion and the 1971-72 figure $1.89 billion.

But outside the Commons, Richardson did say that defence spending will exceed the $2 billion level.

Exact figures would be included in the government's budget estimates to be tabled next week.

Much of the budget increase will likely go towards purchase of aircraft to replace the aging Argus, Canada's main patrol airplane. It is estimated the replacement will cost $600 million.

The minister said the increase does "not necessarily" mean there will be no manpower cuts in the forces. However, Canadians would find the new manpower figures "very satisfactory."

The minister agreed that militia units have not had all the funds they needed and that the budget increase will, in part, correct this situation.

COMBINES URGED TO PROBE STORE AD

OTTAWA (CP) — The combines investigation branch will be asked to investigate a Dominion Stores Ltd. advertisement that says the grocery store chain spearheaded a downward trend in food prices.

Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray agreed in the Commons Monday to draw the matter to the attention of the branch after Ed Nelson (N D P — Burnaby-Seymour) suggested the advertisement may have violated a Criminal Code section that prohibits misleading advertising.

The Commons voted last month to establish a special committee to investigate rising food prices.

Left Out Asians Get Sympathy

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is prepared to deal sympathetically with any Ugandans living in United Nations refugee camps in Europe and seeking to join relatives in Canada, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Monday night.

Acceptance of such refugees would not necessarily require relaxation of immigration regulations, and would most likely involve "very small numbers of people."

There are 2,000 Asians, expelled from Uganda in November by President Idi Amin, in refugee camps in Austria, Italy, Spain, Belgium and Malta. An unknown number have relatives among about 5,000 Asians accepted by Canada.

Andras and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp spoke at a news conference after they had discussed the matter with Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, United Nations high commissioner for refugees. The prince was in Ottawa Monday to talk with Prime Minister Trudeau, Andras and Sharp and to urge Canada to help reunite the families now in Canada with their relations in the European camps.

Department officials say 5,134 Uganda Asians had arrived in Canada by Jan. 15.

The rules might have to be bent a little, however, since some of the Asians are in the camps because they were refused entry to Canada under immigration tests last November.

Andras said he was convinced there could not be very many people seeking to join relatives because there had been no representations made on their behalf by relatives living in Canada.

Three-Point 'Don't Touch' Skagit Plan Urged

A three-point plan of action on the Skagit Valley was proposed in the legislature Monday by Dave Brousson (L — North Vancouver-Capilano).

Brousson urged the provincial government:

—Make a strong policy statement to the legislature on its firm opposition to any proposal to flood the valley;

—Impose a moratorium on all logging now being carried out in the general area of the Skagit; and —Explore with the federal government the possibility of preserving the entire area as a national park, linking both Manning provincial park in B.C. and the North Cascades national park in the U.S.

Brousson said a statement to the house by Premier Dave Barrett is needed to convince Seattle City Light Co. and others in the U.S. that there is determined and not just "political" opposition to the flooding proposal.

Seattle City Light is preparing to raise the level of the Ross Dam in the U.S., which will result in the flooding of the Skagit Valley, including land in B.C.

As recently as last December, Brousson said, logging was still being carried out on the edge of the valley, and the operations should be halted until the issue is settled.

Noting that the U.S. Federal Power Commission's hearings on the matter have been postponed until the fall, Brousson said no one in B.C. appears to appreciate "how really serious Seattle is" in going ahead with the scheme.

He showed the house several voluminous reports already prepared by SCL, and said the company is proposing to spend another $500,000 on the FPC hearings later this year.

"That is the kind of investment that is still going forward," he said.

Labor Conflicts Said Price of Freedom

Labor Minister Bill King told the legislature Monday there will always be conflicts in labor relations.

"That is the price we have to pay in a free, democratic society," he said.

King added that if there is a considerable increase in the number of industrial disputes over the next few years, he will consider that he has failed in his job.

King said there will be an announcement "in the very, very near future," on establishment of some kind of body which will advise the government on areas of improvement in labor legislation. He has spoken in the past about such a commission but has apparently had problems getting the personnel required for such a group.

He said recommendations from this group will be forthcoming within a year, followed by legislative changes. Interim reports may be able to deal with specific areas before a final report is filed, he said.

On the subject of apprenticeship, King said some industries are not pulling their weight in providing apprentice courses, "In some instances it is evident that companies would rather hire qualified workmen away from other employers than train their own. This is not good enough."

He said if companies do not adequately provide for a sufficient number of apprentices, the government should consider looking into establishing a set percentage for employment of apprentices.

As a result of lack of training, there is now a shortage of heavy duty mechanics, automobile repairmen and industrial electricians, King said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old was sent to jail for a total of five months definite and six months' indeterminate in provincial court Monday after pleading guilty to seven counts of auto theft, one count of possession of a stolen car, one of theft under $200 and breaking into a house with intent to commit theft.

Judge William Ostler sentenced Jeffrey Anthony Green, no fixed address, after he pleaded guilty to the car thefts Jan. 22.

He also admitted theft of gasoline to keep one of the stolen cars running and breaking into a Colwood home with the intention of robbing its occupants.

Ostler sentenced the man to five months definite, six months indeterminate on each count, sentences to run concurrently.

Three men were given suspended sentences and placed on six months' probation for possession of marijuana.

John Harold Gerlitz, 18, of Kimberley, Mervin Brooks, 18, of 3208 Frechette and Delmar Willett, 18, of 2553 Empire were each picked up in separate police checks in Victoria over the weekend.

Two men who pleaded guilty to possession of hashish, were each fined $75.

Leslie William Leonard, 19, of 3711 Saanich Road was arrested in Victoria Saturday with $3 worth of hashish and Alan Derek Barlow, 17, of 1412 Beatty, was checked by city police Sunday afternoon.

Alan Howard, 17, of 1304 Charlton, was fined $50 for unlawful discharging of a firearm, in a rifle incident in Saanich dating from last September.

Fines totalling $1,250 were imposed on three persons by Ostler for impaired driving.

Peter A. Browne, 32, of 111-1233 Fairfield, and Colin James Moir, 30, of 1829 Stanley, were each fined $400. Neil James Byers, 35, of 4202 Panorama was fined $450.

Donn Charles McGee, 43, of Courtenay, was fined $300 for impaired driving and $350 for failing to remain at the scene of a Nov. 11 accident.

Victoria Sticks With 1 Twin

A decision last week to reject a formal twinning of Victoria with Canton leaves Victoria with only one sister city.

A suggestion from the mayor of Napier, New Zealand, that Victoria twin with his city has yet to be decided on, although Mayor Peter Pollen has said he will fly to Napier at his own expense.

Since 1967 Victoria has been twinned with Palm Springs, Calif., and since then several cultural exchanges have taken place.

Laszlo Gati went from Victoria to conduct the Desert symphony orchestra, Robert and Winifred Wood gave piano recitals and a display of British Columbia art was shown in Palm Springs.

Speakers have been exchanged, and the mayor of Palm Springs has suggested golf and tennis tournaments.

The city's tourist bureau fund allots $1,000 per year to the twinning.

DOGGY POTTY ON SHOW

Hooked into household plumbing, his "doggy potty" could make curbing a dog a thing of the past.

The boxlike device features a 27-inch belt of astroturf that rotates through a brushing, wash and drying cycle after a dog has completed its business.

Canada's Immigration Regulations have changed.

As of January 1, 1973—all visitors coming to Canada must have an Employment Visa if they intend to work here, or be registered with an Immigration Officer if they intend to visit more than three months.

Those who arrived before January 1, 1973 have until March 31, 1973 to register at a Canada Immigration Centre if they plan to stay beyond March 31. Some will already have legal permission to work here, or stay more than three months. They needn't register until this authorization is to expire.

Exemptions

All Canadian citizens and landed immigrants are, of course, exempt.

All diplomats and visiting Armed Forces personnel performing official duties here are exempt.

Foreign newsmen, visiting businessmen, clergymen, and professional athletes don't need an Employment Visa, but they must register to stay here more than three months.

There are other exemptions: full details are available at any Canada Immigration Centre.

Coming to Canada to work?

Visitors will not be allowed admission to Canada to search for work.

Arrangements for an Employment Visa for a foreign worker can best be made in Canada by the Canadian employer. He should contact the nearest Canada Manpower Centre, which will determine whether Canadian workers are available for the job. The Employment Visa will only be issued if no qualified Canadian citizen or landed immigrant is available.

Penalties

Any violation of the new regulations is an offence, and could result in a fine of up to $500, and/or imprisonment up to six months, and removal from Canada.

Summary

From now on, all visitors must have an Employment Visa to work in Canada; or be registered with an Immigration Officer if they intend to stay here more than three months.

Airport Delay Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Air Transport Association of Canada is urging the federal government to defer until 1975 at leastia decision to expand the Calgary airport.

ATAC president A. C. Morrison said the association "hoped that a proposed new air terminal complex for Calgary would not be developed prematurely in excess of requirements of both the community and the airlines."

Morrison said the ATAC had asked the government not to proceed with its plans until after 1975 when there would be "a clearer picture of the actual needs in light of traffic growth generated by anticipated changes in domestic and international route patterns."

Jail Terms Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmers' Uniion, has called for the imprisonment of officers of large, multi-national corporations which are not "good corporate citizens."

Good corporate citizenship is a myth in Canada, and drastic steps are needed to make foreign companies operate more responsibly, he told the Manitoba legislature's standing committee on economic development.

Atkinson refused to name any particular company and said he was advocating penalties "as a matter of principle."

Own Oil Firm

WINNIPEG (CP) — Toronto financier Percy Bishop has proposed the Manitoba government go into the oil business to save the province's petroleum resources from investors in the United States.

Speaking before the legislature's standing committee on economic development, he lambasted Canadian investment houses for funnelling savings from pension funds, mutual funds and insurance into U.S. companies.

"The hypocritical people in Bay Street have refused to finance the Canadian oil industry," he said. "It's a tragic situation. It couldn't happen in any other country in the world."

Costly Call

WINNIPEG (CP) — Robert Louis Persaud, who made a 5½-hour telephone call from Winnipeg to Barbados without paying, drew a one-year suspended sentence Monday and was ordered to pay $1,357 in restitution.

Persaud, 24, pleaded guilty earlier to theft of telephone service in the $1,005 call last May and a call a month earlier that cost $288. The other $64 was for sales tax. Both calls were to his fiancee.

Court was told Persaud, in Canada since September, 1971, was in charge of cleaning an apartment block and made the calls from unoccupied suites.

Rites for Symons

REGINA (CP) — Funeral services were held today for well-known author and artist Robert Symons who died Thursday at the age of 75.

Symons' vivid painting depicted the people and wildlife of western Canada and his last book, Where the Wagon Led, was a February Book-of-the-Month Club selection. His memoirs, The Broken Snare, was a club selection in 1970.

Symons illustrated many of his books and articles and taught art classes in nature and landscape at the Regina campus of the University of Saskatchewan and at schools in Saskatchewan and Ontario. He was awarded the Saskatchewan Conservation Medal in 1965.

LABOR POOL HANDY

REGINA (CP) — The Regina office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission hasn't had to look far while doubling its staff in the last four months.

Cec Headrik, public relations officer for the office, told a service club meeting Monday the staff has been increased to 142 from 65 to cope with an increase in applications for benefits.

The new employees came from the ranks of the unemployed in southern Saskatchewan.

Headrik said when the number of applications decline, the size of the staff will be reduced.

King Summons Board, Union To His Office

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Labor Minister Bill King today called both sides in the 25-day Greater Victoria School District strike to his office for talks.

He and Education Minister Eileen Dailly met first with school board chairman Peter Bunn, school district superintendent A. J. Longmore and personnel officer Dave Coton for just over one hour.

King and Dailly were not available for comment.

Reached later, Bunn said in response to questions that "there are things in the works that will be initiated by King" but that all statements had to come from the minister.

A school board meeting was to be held tonight.

At midday, King and Dailly were scheduled to meet representatives of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, on strike against the school district.

Union leaders were also to meet among themselves this afternoon to review where they go now following rejection at a three-hour membership meeting Monday night of recommendations for settlement of the contract dispute by mediation officer Clark Gilmour. School board trustees voted acceptance at a half-hour meeting.

Union spokesman Dick Proctor said the bargaining committee and executive were holding an emergency meeting "to consider what happened and to determine what we do, where we go from here."

The mediator's recommendations stumbled over the new classification of janitor-laborer. Both sides had agreed to five pages of changes for a new contract and Gilmour made recommendations running to three pages.

'Extremely Unfortunate'

School board chairman Peter Bunn said the union's rejection of the recommendations is "extremely unfortunate. They are totally disrupting the education of 31,000 students. There are clauses there which the board is not happy with. It's a lot of money — $200,000 for this year, $220,000 next year."

Bunn said the recommendations should have been treated as a package and "not nitpicked."

Proctor said union members voted down the new janitor-laborer classification "so they voted down the whole package."

Proctor said the school board was insistent on the new classification and had proposed that work outside the school be permitted for up to three hours a day but not more than 12 hours a week at any school without extra assistance to clean the inside, and a 5 cents an hour differential.

The union counter-offered that the janitor-laborer could either work four hours inside, four hours outside, or six months inside, six months outside.

The mediator, he said, recommended the 5 cents differential if a job description was accepted.

"The membership said they do not want janitor-laborer under any conditions. The mediator recommended substantially what the board has proposed."

Bunn said there is "an extremely complicated background" to the janitor-laborer issue and referred questions to Coton. He wasn't available this morning.

On another main issue in the strike, Proctor said the classification of matron, in effect a day-time janitor, would be redescribed as day cleaner and the work would be along lines agreed to by both sides in a job description.

Don't Have to Scrub Floors

"There are differences — they are not responsible for security of the building, they do not have to scrub floors or burn waste," he said.

The mediator recommended a day cleaner rate of $3.16 an hour, or 44 cents an hour less than janitors, who work night and graveyard shifts, prior to the general wage increase.

Proctor said there was a "spoken understanding" that any matron — they are all women — who wanted to apply for janitor jobs could do so.

"The idea was that either sex could do both jobs," he said. When questioned if there was any wording proposed to state this, he said he couldn't recall it.

The matrons used to be janitors until two years ago when a new contract was signed setting up the matron position as a day-time one. The union contended they do the same work as janitors, but were being paid $2.85 and $3.11 an hour compared with the janitors' $3.60. The school board said they did different work.

Bunn said the day cleaner job would be a lighter one than janitor, and there would be a wage differential. But he said the job could be done by a man or a woman, with hours restricted to 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Men and women would also be hired equally into the all-male janitor classification, if women could carry out the work.

Proctor also outlined these other areas either recommended or not recommended by the mediator:

—Double time for overtime after two hours. It was after four hours;

—No janitors to be required to clean exterior windows above the first floor. This would end the practise of having janitors use 40-foot poles to wash high outside windows;

—No split shifts;

—Eighteen cents per mile for use of personal automobile. It was 15 cents.

—No change in vacations or sick leave;

—Temporary employees to receive base rate after three months instead of after one year;

—No recommendation on the union request for consecutive graveyard shifts;

—Wages: Across-the-board increases of 33 cents an hour Jan. 1, 1973, 8 cents July 1, 1973, 33 cents Jan. 1, 1974, 8 cents July 1, 1974. Plus 10 cents an hour for tradesmen Jan. 1, 1973, and 10 cents Jan. 1, 1974.

The position of the two parties immediately prior to Gilmour's recommendation was: Union — 72 cents an hour in a one-year agreement; School board — 33 cents an hour in each year of a two-year agreement.

On a percentage basis, the union had been seeking 20 per cent in one year, the board had offered just over 9 per cent per year, the mediator recommended 11 per cent per year, but in two stages per year.

Reader's Tip Leads To Arrests

Leonard Larson, 42, serving time for robbery, and housebreaker Wilfred John Humphreys, 36, were arrested Monday night as police from Central Saanich and Saanich burst into their room at the Brentwood Motel, 7215 West Saanich.

Police had followed up a telephone tip from someone who had read Larson and Humphreys' description in Monday's Times. Police arrived at the motel and arrested the two men without a struggle.

The escapers were both remanded without plea or election to Feb. 13.

$13,000 Damage In Fires

Fires in two Greater Victoria homes today caused a total of $13,000 damage but there were no injuries to occupants.

At 8:12 a.m. sparks from the back of a television set resulted in a $7,000 fire at 516 Tait, Saanich Fire Chief Harold Gains said.

Mrs. Myrna K. Rand, owner of the home, was at work when the fire broke out. Her children, Gerald, 6, and Deborah, 9, were watching television when "the young lad noticed sparks coming out the back of the set. The drapes were instantly ignited," said Gains.

A family friend, Mrs. Donna Boklage, 876 Attrie, called shortly after the fire began, instructed the children to leave the house and telephoned the fire department.

Firemen battled the blaze for two hours, but the walls in the kitchen and living room, lined with veneer panelling, were gone before firemen arrived, said Gains.

In Victoria, a short circuit in an electrical panel caused an estimated $6,000 damage to the basement and porch of a home at 569 Hillside.

David and Marjett Pabla, tenants in the house, owned by Ross Lemire, 631 Hillside, were forced from their second-storey suite by smoke at 1:38 a.m., said Deputy Chief Carl Coates. There were no other tenants in the house.

Store Charged

Charges of misleading advertising, under the Consumer Protection Act, were laid against a local furniture store in provincial court today.

Traders Home Furnishings Ltd. and its president Victor Orest Kowalchuk, are charged with placing an ad Nov. 26 for furniture without giving the number of instalments in their time-paying plan for the goods.

The riddle of the anonymous James Bay ratepayers' association was solved Monday night when Ald. Percy Frampton, a James Bay property owner, and highrise developer J. A. Mace appeared as chairman and feature speaker at the association's inaugural meeting.

About 100 owners of James Bay properties gathered at Edelweiss Hall on Niagara in response to an unsigned circular letter which protested a recent move by the city administration to reduce the density of apartment zoning contained in a 1967 James Bay overall plan.

In two hours of lively debate, a strong faction more or less led by Mace argued that reduction of apartment zoning in three proposed areas of James Bay (where the planners say there is durable housing) would ruin profits of homeowners wishing to sell out.

Two members of this faction were homeowners, one was a highrise developer, another a real estate salesman, and one Frampton, an alderman.

Another faction argued that James Bay under the 1967 plan is basically headed for the fate of the West End peninsula of Vancouver, which is densely built up with highrise apartment and hotel towers. This faction was composed exclusively of homeowners.

The first development in the Christmas-festooned hall was the revelation of how the ratepayer group got started.

Bob White, 325 Irving, said he received phone calls from neighbors after the Daily Colonist published a letter of his Jan. 14 protesting the rezoning proposals.

White, who said he had built many apartment buildings himself, said Ald. Frampton and developer Mace were among the callers. A circular letter (unsigned) and Monday's meeting were agreed on.

White, who spoke first, and identified himself only after a request from the audience, said the city's proposed rezoning would make the single-family housing areas slums because of the expense of fixing up old houses.

"No matter what the mayor or the other dreamers say, we must wake up before the public hearing," White said, in reference to a public hearing which must be called before rezonings are approved.

Ald. Frampton took the role of chairman of the meeting, commenting that it was something new for him to be chairman of a ratepayers' association. He said he wanted the group to be an outlet for the opinions of taxpayers in James Bay.

Next was David Bowman, 356 Simcoe, who said he owned several pieces of property in James Bay and had lived there for 12 years.

"I am one of the faceless ones who is supposed to have started this group," he said.

"I've never built a building in Victoria. I have not speculated, and I've never sold a building I built," he said.

Bowman said the proposed three areas of single family housing were the "keynote" of why he was at the meeting and had helped form the group.

"I asked the tenants of my buildings whether they had been consulted about the new plans and in no case did they say yes," Bowman said.

"As an owner and taxpayer I have not been consulted," he said.

A voice asked if he was consulted in 1967 when original plans were approved. Bowman said he did not think he was consulted then, either.

Then into the glare of the television lights stepped Mace who said he had put nearly $20 million worth of development into James Bay.

"James Bay is the oldest area with the oldest houses, and it should be developed first," he said.

He read a newspaper report of his appearance before city council in 1965 calling for a plan for James Bay with parks and other amenities.

Mace said James Bay could never become "another West End" because planned densities were only half those of the West End. He said areas planned to be zoned back to single family and duplex were ill-suited to duplexes because most of the sites were too small to conform to duplex use.

Vic Smith, who said he was a realtor in James Bay, quoted the case of Miss V. E. Mesher, 16 Paddon, descendant of a pioneer, who had been offered $32,000 for her house when it was zoned for apartments, and had now lost the offer. Miss Mesher later confirmed the account.

Then Kay Lines, 27 South Turner, said she knew of a woman property owner who was offered $14,500 for her house by a developer who had surrounded the property with an apartment building and told her she would be hounded out by hippies and alcoholics.

Lorne De Girolamo, 140 Medana, said he saw three factions in James Bay property owners: those who wanted the best return on an investment; another group which he estimated at two-thirds of the owners he said were holding for investment, did not live in the area, and did not "give a damn"; then he said there were those who wanted to live in the area and enjoy it.

"People who want to live here don't want to be forced out by monstrosities or traffic — all I want out of it is the price of my house. It's these rip-off artists who distort prices who stop people living here. Homes are for living in!"

Bill McKechnie, 613 Avalon, said property owners should consider the historical value of James Bay and restore their houses, making it into a prestige area of attraction to tourists and high-paying purchasers alike.

Blayney Scott, 306 Dallas, called for a properly balanced community.

"Why can't you think of a place for people to live?" he asked. "Why do you think of property as a place to peddle?"

"I don't see why property values should go down after some down-zoning, Scott told a jeering audience. "People will realize it's a livable area; it should have some value in itself."

Signatures were taken for the formation of a registered ratepayers' association 1973.

At the outset of the meeting, Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the city zoning committee, and Kathleen Ransom, member of the advisory planning commission, were barred from the meeting on the grounds that they were not ratepayers in James Bay. Ald. Frampton later advised Mrs. Ransom she could enter, but she declined.

Weekly Lectures Set At City's Highrise U.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Ivory tower meets highrise.

That, in summary, is the University of Victoria's latest plan for sharing its educational resources with the community.

The university and the Provincial Museum are jointly going to begin holding courses in highrise apartment buildings, strictly for highrise dwellers.

First course, a series of four weekly lectures on British Columbia Indians, will begin Feb. 14 for residents of the Lord and Lady Simcoe apartments on Simcoe St. in James Bay.

The free lectures will be given by Dr. David Wyatt of the university's anthropology department and J. C. Haggerty, assistant curator of archeology at the Provincial Museum, using Indian artifacts and illustrated material. They will be held in the lounge area of one of the buildings.

A second series of four lectures will follow, starting March 14, in another highrise.

Highrises were picked for the experiment because they have such a high concentration of people, said Dr. Lawrence Devlin, director of continuing education at UVic. The two Simcoes have about 800 people in them, he said.

"We were also concerned about some of the negative aspects characteristic of highrise living," Devlin said.

Attending a course right in their building might break down some of the barriers between highrise dwellers.

Devlin has no idea whether two or 200 people will turn out for the evening classes. He's hoping for about 40.

"If this kind of experiment goes well we'll be thinking of broadening it out," he said.

Eventually, the highrise dwellers themselves could get together, decide what kind of course they'd like to have, and then ask the university to set it up, he said.

NEW CHAIRMAN of the Greater Victoria Public Library's board is Ald. Art Mebs, of Esquimalt. Elected vice-chairman at today's meeting was Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell.

English Department Head Picked

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

A 31-year-old University of Rochester professor has been chosen by a University of Victoria selection committee to head the university's 50-member English department.

Ottawa native David Jeffrey needs only UVic presidential and Board of Governor approval before taking over the department that boasts more than 2,000 students enrolled in English courses.

But there is a hitch. Jeffrey, who taught at UVic in 1968, has been offered the academic vice presidency at Rochester, and while he wants to return here, he is anxiously awaiting official word.

Contacted in Rochester, New York today, Mrs. Jeffrey said, "We're waiting for an official letter.

"Right now we're sitting on the fencepost. Our final decision will be made early next week."

Jeffrey, who will replace Professor Roy Leslie if approved, won out over 70 other applicants through a complicated selection procedure.

The committee, composed of four members from the English department and three deans, brought three finalists to UVic in order to meet with administration and English department members.

Then, English department members wrote anonymous assessments of each candidate.

"There was an overwhelming show of strong letters in favor of Jeffrey," assistant professor Patrick Grant said today.

With a virtually unanimous English department consensus, the recommendation then went to the Deans' Advisory Committee. This committee advises Arts and Science Dean Jean Paul-Vinay, who was also a member of the selection committee.

According to Grant, the three deans on the selection committee, including Vinay, were impressed with the unanimity displayed by the English department.

"In fact the selection has been made," Grant said, "this committee, we hope, will expedite things and get the administration moving."

Jeffrey, a specialist in medieval lyrics and drama, has been instrumental in establishing a medieval museum at the Rochester university. He took his BA at Wheaton College, Illinois and graduated from Princeton with his English doctorate.

Homemade Cereal for the Crunch and $

By MARY MOORE

Our readers certainly test me. For instance read this letter:

"Dear Mary: Thanks for the Homemade Health Cereal recipe which you sent on my request. However, it is not the type I want that recipe contains coconut and too much sweet taste. The recipe I want is not a "crunch" type. It has raisins and looks almost white and floury when poured into a dish. The trade name is Alpen and it is a Swiss product. I have five children waiting for your brain wave to help stretch our dollars. Doris A. B."

That letter was dated November 28, 1972. The request has been nagging me ever since and in this past week I tried to reproduce it. The recipe which follows was declared "better" than the commercial product and I hope helps Doris stretch her dollars.

SWISS HEALTH CEREAL

4 c. raw wheat flakes (seed store)
½ c. light brown sugar (first amount)
2 c. steel cut rolled oats (regular) (seed store for steel cut)
2 tbsp. fresh skim milk powder
1¼ c. light brown sugar (second amount)
1¼ tsp. salt
6 tbsp. raisins
2 c. ground almonds or filberts
½ c. fresh wheat germ (health store)
¼ c. sesame seeds (health store)

Measure the wheat flakes and ½ cup brown sugar (first amount) into a 13x9" pan and put in cold oven. Turn heat on to 300 deg. Fahr. and leave 15 minutes stirring once.

Meanwhile mix together in a large bowl the rolled oats, milk powder, 1¼ cups brown sugar (second amount), salt, raisins, nuts, wheat germ and sesame seeds. Mix well. When wheat flakes have baked 15 minutes add rolled oats mixture to them and mix thoroughly. Return to oven and bake 40 minutes longer at 300 deg. Fahr. stirring at least 4 times during this final baking period.

Do not be tempted to taste the mixture while it is hot for it will burn your tongue. The raisins swell up until they are plump.

Cool to room temperature and store in covered jars or double plastic bags.

Serve as you would a dry cereal with milk — but less cereal as it is rich. No sugar is necessary as the cereal itself is sweetened.

Schools Give Up Too Soon: Researcher

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the past nine years Jerome Kagan has studied the way children learn to use their minds. Like most of his colleagues, he believed that a child's experiences during his first year determine mental growth.

But he doesn't believe that any more, Kagan, a professor of human development at Harvard University, reported here in a recent speech at the American Association for the Advancement of Science convention.

He said seven months spent in a poor, isolated Guatemalan Indian village (he called it a 14th century pre-Columbian village) changed his mind.

In the village of San Marcos, he said, mothers left their children alone in their huts for the first year of life. No one played or talked to the children, and by the time they were one and a half years old, they were supremely retarded.

By the time the children reached 11, Kagan found, they had turned active and alert. They scored high in memory, reasoning ability and perception. The boys hunted with their fathers and the girls helped their mothers grind corn.

This means, Kagan said, that the intellectual and mental development of children "is much more plastic than American psychologists have believed."

The lesson for education is clear: schools give up on children too soon, Kagan said. This is especially true for children brought up in slums, who enter schools less prepared in reading and speaking than children from middle-class backgrounds. Even though the slum children are intelligent, they are assumed to be dumb because they can't read.

"Every child in the United States short of the seven per cent or 8 per cent born with a biological deficit, is capable basically of mastering the school skills," he said.

He said that schools should stress music, artistic and speaking ability, and co-operative ventures working with hands to give confidence to children who are not familiar with reading, writing and arithmetic.

French cuisine has long been famous for its liberal use of wine.

For instance, to cream soups, just before serving, add one to two tablespoons of sherry, vermouth or dry table wine.

For stewed or brasied lamb or pot roasts, add to the remaining liquid half of the amount, either of medium dry red or dry white wine after browning.

For poached fish use dry white table wine or extra dry vermouth with the same amount of water at the start of the cooking period.

For a tasty fruit cup, add 1 to 2 tablespoons per person of sauterne, cream sherry, port or tokay, just before serving.

The four-page foler "How To Cook With Jordan Wines" shows how you can add magic to your cooking. You will learn exactly what kind of wine to use for specific foods, how much and when to add it. Once you have acquired the habit of cooking of wine, you may want to experiment with types other than the ones suggested.

Glamor in Office? No!

DEAR ABBY: I know I must have many sympathizers on this one. I need some up-to-date advice on how to look feminine and glamorous at the office without letting men think I am on the make.

If I dress attractively, in bright colors or in the latest styles, all the old creeps (never the nice eligible men) make passes at me. If I dress to repel the old creeps, I creep further into old maidhood. I am 30. Can you help me? — CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED: "Nice, eligible men" never make passes at anyone. A guide to appropriate office attire would include a long list of don'ts:

Don't strive for "glamor" in the office. Femininity, yes. Glamor, no! Don't wear skirts too short. Or low necklines. Don't wear anything skin tight. See-thru blouses are a "no no." Leave the junk jewelry at home. Don't wear cocktail-type attire to work. Pants are fine if your office permits them, but only if they are well-tailored and have a matching jacket. "Lounging pajamas," jump-suits or jeans with any old top are inappropriate.

If you follow the above suggestions, and the old creeps still make passes at you, better check the look in your eye.

DEAR ABBY: I think you were way off base in your attitude about the teen-aged girl who was "hurt" because her creative writing teacher began snubbing her after she wrote a love poem to him.

No one knows how many excellent teachers have had their professional careers ruined because they didn't clamp down some starry-eyed teenaged girl before her infatuation got out of control.

It's too bad that girls such as your correspondent have to be hurt once in a while, but her teacher probably snubbed her in self-denfence.

MARVIN J.

DEAR MARVIN: You could be right.

DEAR ABBY: I still carry my first wife's picture in my billfold even though there is absolutely nothing left between us.

This seems to be quite an issue with my second wife to whom I've been married for one year. My second wife gave me a picture of herself, but when I put it in with the "other" picture, she took it back.

I assured her that she has no reason to feel hurt as I couldn't care less for my first wife, but that doesn't seem to satisfy her. She refuses to give me her picture as long as I carry the other one. Now it's become a matter of principle with me. I don't like to be dictated to. Will you settle this matter? SECOND TIMER

DEAR TIMER: I'm with "Wife Number Two" all the way. Get rid of "Number One's" picture. No wallet is big enough for both of them.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Dover waitress" who was so upset because of the small tips people left her:

I was a clerk in yard goods and ready-to-wear, back in the days when a clerk really waited on the customers. I dragged many a heavy bolt of yard goods down off the shelves, and I'd put them back up again. In those days my salary was $60 a month for a 50-hour week. I was happy, too. I wonder if that waitress ever tips a clerk when she makes a purchase. BESSIE B. (NOW RETIRED)

Heart Disease-Soft Water Link Studied

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A study by a British research team has strengthened the suspicion that soft water, such as is supplied in Greater Victoria, produces a greater risk of heart disease.

But two local heart specialists said Friday more research is needed and any conclusions now would be premature.

The latest findings are reported by four doctors from the Medical Research Council in London in the latest issue of the medical journal, The Lancet.

In their comparison of 489 executive-grade civil servants living is six soft-water and six hard-water towns, the researchers found those living in soft-water areas had significantly higher blood pressure, levels of fat (cholesterol) in the blood stream, and heart rates.

Higher levels of all three are possible precursors of coronaries, other heart disease and strokes.

Greater Victoria water commissioner Ron Upward describes the local water supply as "very soft." It's that way along most of the west coast, he said, because the source for the most part is rain and melted snow.

Upward did note that Sidney is supplied by wells.

The British researchers include Dr. Margaret Crawford and Prof. J. Morris, the acknowedged experts from that country in the field.

"The observed differences in blood pressure, blood cholestrol and heart rate levels could be important in explaining a substantial part of the difference in cardiovascular mortality between these hard and soft water towns," they say.

One study of 60 major towns in England and Wales showed the death rate from heart disease among people aged 35 to 64 was 546 men and 248 women per 100,000 in hard water areas compared with 751 men and 355 women in soft water areas.

The soft water heart disease link was first noticed in Japan. Subsequent American, Canadian and British studies confirmed the link, suggesting that hard water could reduce the incidence of heart disease by as much as 30 per cent.

The next stage of the latest British study will report on levels of other chemicals in blood and urine and the prevalence of sudden deaths from coronaries.

The study of the 12 towns is providing hard facts rather than the statistical links known previously. The new information may provide the evidence doctors need before advising water authorities to change their supplies — a costly business and one which could be technically difficult.

One of the Victoria heart specialists said there have been several reports on the soft water question in recent years "and the final answer is not here yet."

If lack of minerals in the water supply proves to be a factor in heart disease, correction will have to be applied for people right from birth. By the time a person reaches middle age, the damage is done, he said.

The other doctor said it would be premature to suggest steps for countering soft water to the public.

Still to be evaluated is how water may affect the health of people. Is it from drinking it, or possibly cooking certain foods in it, for example. These are questions still to be answered, he said.

Clues to Language In Signs of Deaf

By ROBERT REINHOLD
New York Times

LA JOLLA, Calif. — To most of us the sign language of the deaf is little more than excited gesturing, but to Dr. Ursula Bellugi it is full of poetry, wit, irony and — most important to her as a linguist — some tantalizing clues to the fundamental nature of all languages and how they are acquired by children.

The clues are imbedded in the complex structure of sign, a language that is unlike most forms of human communication because it employs movement and sight rather than speech and hearing. It has its own syntax, grammar and even folk art.

Many linguists believe that humans are born with an innate biological capacity for languages since children everywhere demonstrate at a certain point in their development a sudden flowering of language ability, subconsciously analyzing sentences and applying "rules." But scientists have found it difficult to measure to what extent this is influenced by the medium of communication, speech.

Dr. Bellugi's theory is that by examining a language in another "modality," in which speech and hearing are absent, one should get some idea what traits of language are truly universal and which are peculiar to spoken language.

The study is still very rudimentary, but she has some indications that while deaf children seem to display much the same skill as hearing children in acquiring language, the underlying structural characteristics of sign may be quite different from those of speech. If this is borne out, then linguists may have to rethink some widely held assumptions about the universality of language structure.

PRICE INQUIRY BEGINS

OTTAWA (CP) — The special Commons committee on food prices will begin hearings this week and chairman Bud Cullen promised Thursday to "lower the boom" on any attempts to evade questions.

The committee also was told by the Conservative MP that the whole investigation boils down to whether the committee will recommend controls on food prices.

Organizational work was wrapped up in the second committee sitting today, with agreement to hear first from statistician Sylvia Ostrey of Statistics Canada Feb. 8.

Members agreed to sit each Tuesday and Thursday and Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray and Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan will be before it on Tuesday, Feb. 12.

From then on it would start hearing a string of representative organizations for farmers, consumers, wholesalers, advertisers, packagers and grocers before producing an interim report, required of it within 60 days.

The committee voted down a motion by Alf Gleave NDP Saskatoon-Biggar that it have counsel, legal or economic, from the outset. It left the door open to securing such advice later if the need becomes apparent.

New teacher no problem for student

Suzuki Method Succeeding

LONDON (FWF) — Music teachers are finding the Suzuki system of teaching the violin of particular value in cases where children would have setbacks through having to change their method of learning when changing teachers.

The most striking feature of the method is the replacement of conventional learning disciplines by a number of ingeniously devised games. All technical skills are broken down into easily acquired elements and each one of these is taught to the child by means of an enjoyable game.

They play "standing in boats" to promote good stance; "windscreen wipers" to give confidence in holding the bow; and "trains going through tunnels" for skill in manipulating it. Such games are designed to allow the child to feel, hear, and see its own progress stage by stage so that a real sense of confidence and enjoyment is cultivated.

Such Exemplary Parents Those Mothers on TV

At least sex and violence exist in the real world; what doesn't exist is a mother who serves breakfast wearing a $175 Pucci pantsuit and false eyelashes.

TV mothers are such exemplary parents. They are never too busy cleaning gnats out of the overhead light fixtures or vacuuming up potato chips from under the sofa cushions to take you to the science museum or to the zoo. Doris Day never breaks down and begins sobbing: "Get out of the kitchen this minute and take that rotten hamster with you?"

"It's a good thing I waxed with Mr. Shiny," they smirk, patting the bottle lovingly. Never, "If I've told you once, I've told you a thousand times to wipe your feet. Do you think that I enjoy waxing this lousy floor?"

Of course, to be fair, children's literature is at least as untrue to reality.

Worst of all are Mr. and Mrs. Bobbsey, parents of the Bobbsey Twins, fun loving youngsters who are given to tumbling down abandoned mine shafts. Mrs. Bobbsey is unfailingly cheerful in the face of crises that would send any real-life mother straight to her analyst.

Mr. Bobbsey, who is rarely caught without a claw hammer in one hand and a saber saw in the other, is pantingly eager not only to repair dolls and rehang doors, but to whip up a split-level tree house for the twins to fall out of.

Our children's parents measure up so poorly that I'm quite pleased that they tolerate having us about at all. I just wish that they'd quit referring to us as "The Odd Couple."

THE GREATER VICTORIA SCHOOL BOARD has planned its 1973 construction program, under Referendum 12. The program emphasizes fire prevention, anti-burglary and vandalism alarms, and science laboratory safety. Three libraries are also planned.

THE PROPERTY OWNER will decide at the polls on February 17 whether this construction may go forward. A 60 per cent "yes" vote is needed for approval. Failure of the referendum would block the program.

THE COST to most home-owners would be $1 or less per year, for 20 years. In general, the $1 per year figure applies to homes worth $30,000.

THE PROGRAM will not provide any new buildings, and it will not pay for current operating costs such as staff salaries.

THE SCHOOL TRUSTEES unanimously endorse the 1973 construction program, and ask the electorate to approve it.

Oak Bay Turns Down New Waste Cost Split

The score was 1-1 Monday night when Saanich and Oak Bay councils each voted on a revised formula for sharing the capital cost of a regional solid waste disposal system.

Saanich said yes and Oak Bay turned thumbs down, at least until the Capital Regional District provides more facts and figures.

Saanich previously objected to paying the lion's share on the old formula based on population alone. The new formula takes into account both population (75 per cent) and assessed values for school tax (25 per cent).

Under conditions of the amended formula, Victoria and Saanich will pay approximately equal shares.

Oak Bay council, on the other hand, had earlier approved the cost sharing on a per-capita basis.

Ald. Douglas McLelland said the CRD should send representatives to explain the technical and political aspects.

"I want the Capital Regional District in the council chamber explaining to us so that we can vote and help our taxpayers in this matter," McLelland said.

He said he was even more concerned about the CRD's management of sewage disposal.

"Here (solid waste disposal) we're talking about half a mill but with sewage disposal we're talking about millions of dollars," he said.

Ald. Douglas Watts agreed that district plans for sewage disposal should be aired and debated with the CRD.

The council agreed not to give approval of the CRD's application on solid waste disposal until the matter has been studied by council's works committee.

A position paper from the Victoria branch of the Society for Pollution and Environment control, prepared last September, was referred to Saanich public works committee for discussion.

Some alternatives to ocean-dumping of raw sewage are available "at little cost to the taxpayer," the paper suggested.

"Do we have the right to abuse this common property resource — the sea?" SPEC asked.

Ald. Fred Severson said he had to agree with many of the points made by the brief, but "I certainly can see there would be a fantastic cost factor."

Ald. Leslie Passmore supported him: "I disagree vigorously" that cost of alternatives would be slight. "The cost (of reversing the flow of sewer systems for treatment purposes) would be utterly fantastic," he said.

He added that ratepayers may have "anything they wish if they are prepared to pay for it."

Ald. Alan Newberry suggested some financial aspects be considered by public works, dealing with sewage disposal. It was unfair to reject the brief out of hand, he felt.

An ad hoc committee of the mayor, works chairman Ald. William Campbell, Severson and Ald. William Noel was appointed to discuss views for submission to the Union of B.C. Municipalities when it presents a brief on solid waste and sewage disposal to a public inquiry of the Pollution Control Board April 30.

Puget Sound Skimmer

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A new 500-gallon capacity oil skimmer has been stationed in Tacoma's Commencement Bay, the Washington State Oil Spill Co-Operative reports.

The addition of the skimmer brings to $350,000 the amount paid by the co-operative in anti-spill measures during the past year, co-operative manager John Doolittle said Monday. Another skimmer is based at Bellingham.

The new skimmer, which can be moved by trailer to other areas, can operate up to speeds of 5 knots. It has a high pressure wash system which can be used to scrub oil from boats, pilings, and rocks, Doolittle said.

The oil-recovery system is based on a filter that retains oil but allows free passage of water.

Camosun Opens to Foreigners

Foreign students will be allowed to enrol at Camosun College "without restriction due to nationality or race" but will have to pay the fee normally borne by local taxpayers.

The decision came at a Camosun College council meeting Monday night after much debate over whether foreign students should be restricted to a quota enrolment and whether they should pay all costs involved in their education.

Council members were generally agreed that foreign students should be allowed to attend and received a report showing that five of B.C.'s seven other universities and colleges admitted such students.

Having agreed to change the basic ruling, council members argued whether a numerical restriction should be put on foreign enrolment.

"We can't simply let them flood in here as they wish," said Lavinia Greenwood, who moved that "the number to be enrolled shall be reviewed annually by the council."

Council agreed to the restriction and also approved Mrs. Greenwood's amendment that only foreign students aged 19 and over be accepted.

They rejected, however, her further motion that non-Canadian students be required to pay the total cost of the schooling.

"I don't see why Canadian taxpayers should have to pay for foreign children's education," she said, "I wouldn't expect a foreign government to pay for my children's education."

College principal Grant Fisher said average total cost of one semester at the college is $1,335, while students fees are $125 and the average cost to local taxpayers is about $250.

"These are dark days when the only college with a quota system also slaps on high costs with the only purpose to discriminate on grounds of wealth," said Philip Ney.

Walter Donald agreed with Ney and moved that foreign students be required to pay the amount normally borne by local taxpayers — around $250. The motion passed.

Tug Seaworthy Inquiry Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Captain Frank McDonald, relief captain of the tug Haro Straits, told a commission of inquiry Monday that the tug was seaworthy a week before it sank off Point Roberts, Wash., in a gale.

McDonald was a witness at the inquiry into the sinking of the 61-foot tug on Feb. 27, 1972. Five crew members died. Mr. Justice Frank Collier of the federal Court of Canada is conducting the inquiry.

McDonald said the tug had had some steering difficulties, but he believed these had been corrected the day he turned over the command of the vessel, a week before the sinking.

He added that in an emergency it took only a second to turn from automatic to manual steering and added that all the radios were in good condition when he turned over command of the tug.

Lifesaving gear aboard the tug included two inflatable life rafts, a small lifeboat on deck, 11 life jackets, four life rings and rescue flares, he said.

Questioned on the handling of the vessel, McDonald said that if the engines were stopped, it would be possible for the tug to be pulled over by the force of a 70-knot gale on two empty woodchip barges the Haro Straits was hauling at the time of the mishap.

WOMAN HEADS C. SAANICH RECREATION

Appointment of Saanich Peninsula school trustee Norma Sealey as recreation director for Central Saanich will be "a tremendous shot in the arm for this municipality," recreation commission member Anne Foerster said today.

Mrs. Sealey has been named to direct recreation for a three-month period until May 1 by the B.C. Recreation Association.

Born in Central Saanich but now a Sidney resident, Sealey has a 10-year background in recreation, including a position with the U.S. Air Force in Scotland.

Ald. David Hill told Central Saanich council Monday the job is being funded by the federal Local Initiative Program.

The newly-formed Recreation Commission has been at work since September but Foerster explained the 12-member commission realized that a specialized approach is necessary in order to organize volunteer groups throughout Central Saanich.

It Took Four-Storey Fall To Break Open Safe

Four screwdrivers and a hammer were broken. An axe was also used, all to no effect.

The safe burst open on impact, and $450 was taken. They also took $200 from other offices in the building.

58 Enrolled

NELSON (CP) — A total of 58 students enrolled in Notre Dame University's midstart program in January, compared with 23 when the program began last year. It offers university courses to high school students graduating in January.

Bennett Knows

KELOWNA (CP) — Fred Stevens, president of the South Okanagan Social Credit Association, said Monday opposition leader Bennett has not lost touch with his South Okanagan riding and is being informed of developments in the riding. The Okanagan District Labor Council had called for Bennett's resignation. Bennett left on a world cruise in December, and will return in March.

Pollution Charges

COQUITLAM (CP) — Charges of pollution were laid Monday under the Fisheries Act against three gravel pit operators: Aliard Contractors Ltd., Jack Cewe Ltd., and Johnson Trucking (Western) Ltd. The companies were charged with unlawfully depositing a harmful substance into the Coquitlam River.

Strongboxes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Service station operators, plagued by a rash of hold-ups, are installing a new security system. Many stations in the area are installing strongboxes, in which attendants drop money after sales. Signs are posted telling motorists that attendants carry only a minimum of change, usually $10.

Offer Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stewardesses who have been on strike since Jan. 12 rejected a new offer from Wardair Canada Ltd.

Wardair, Canada's largest charter airline, offered the 100 stewardesses a higher pay bonus for "positioning" hours in excess of 15 a month. Positioning hours are those spent in preparation for a flight. The airline also offered a 65-hour a month guarantee on flying hours with an average 85-hour a month maximum.

Boat Explodes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Edward H. Gillis of Richmond was treated for immersion after he spent 10 minutes in the water when his 21-foot inboard-outboard cabin cruiser exploded below the Lions Gate Bridge. Both 30-gallon fuel tanks exploded. Damage was estimated at $5,000.

CFP Sues IWA

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Forest Products has filed a breach of contract suit against the International Woodworkers of America, Local 1-217 as a result of picketing at the Eburne sawmill here. CFP also claims damages for infractions of the Mediation Services Act. Work at the mill was halted Wednesday by striking shingle workers from the adjoining Huntting-Merritt CFP mill, but resumed Monday.

U.S. Studies Energy Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) A new subcommittee was created by the U.S. Monday to deal with the U.S. energy crisis.

Represenative James Howard (Dem.—N.J.) was named chairman of the energy subcommittee.

Howard said the subcommittee would seek to speed the construction of safe nuclear power plants, and investigate solar and geo-thermal energy as two possible replacements for coal and oil.

JOB CREATING SCHEMES HELP 700 IN CITY AREA

Federal job creation schemes have produced more than 700 winter jobs in the Capital Region.

Cost to the government in wages for the new jobs totals about $1,287,000.

Three programs are involved in Canada Manpower's make-work efforts: Local Initiatives Programs in the public and private sectors and Training-On-the-Job schemes in local businesses.

Victoria's municipal and school board L.I.P. projects total 21, creating 216 jobs, while private projects total 44 and employ 366 workers.

Most L.I.P. projects began in December or early January and will terminate May 31.

Manpower assistant manager F. E. Schroeder said about 12 more L.I.P. proposals have been submitted to Manpower's regional office and may also receive federal grants.

Training-on-the-Job, which aims to create new jobs rather than just supply temporary employment, has provided 119 positions so far, generating $240,000 in wages, $137,000 of which is to be paid by the federal government.

Under this program, employers hire and train workers in addition to their regular labor force and Manpower pays 75 per cent of their salaries during the first half of their training and 50 per cent in the latter half.

Training programs may run six to 40 weeks and Manpower will not pay more than $118 a week.

Schroeder said local businessmen submitted 381 proposals for job training and more than 200 of those are still being processed.

Many of these, he said, may be accepted but processing will take up to another month.

Schroeder explained that Manpower plans these new jobs to become permanent but cannot force employers to hire trainees after the Manpower-subsidized program is terminated.

Two other job-creation programs, which are on-going rather than one-shot efforts, are on-the-job-training where there are indentifiable skill shortages and training for the disadvantaged.

These are not "high impact" programs, Schroeder said, and he has no definite figures on the number of jobs they have created so far.

Fight Drained Man. NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Manitoba's New Democratic Party government is not likely ever again to put through legislation as controversial as its government auto insurance bill because the experience was so draining, Manitoba MLA Cy Gonick said Monday.

"The Manitoba NDP started on the offensive. Then the auto insurance thing came in and drained our energy and sapped us. We became defensive about the things we'd done," said Gonick.

He told a University of British Columbia audience insurance companies and opposition parties mounted such a concerned campaign against the government that the MLAs felt competely alone.

"We took such a beating on that one I swear it'll never happen again," he said. "We were 28 guys and it looked like we were against the whole world.

Gonick, a member of the Manitoba Waffle movement before its demise, said later he does not expect to run again.

He said he had little hope the NDP can realize traditional socialist goals.

"Raising taxes is a futile way of redistributing income because when you raise the taxes for the rich man or the company they will simpy push the taxes onto others through the products they sell. If you lower the tax for a poor person to give them a little more money the rich people will charge them more in prices, credit rates and so on."

'It's About Time Food Prices Up'

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says he has little sympathy with persons who complain about rising food prices.

"Prices have finally turned the corner for our farmers and it's about time," he told a closed meeting of executives of southwestern Ontario Liberal riding associations during the weekend.

"Certainly I have sympathy for the consumers of food and fixed incomes," he said, "but I don't think we can or should expect farmers of Canada to carry the welfare load for our entire society by accepting unreasonably low prices for their products."

"You can wait for the report of the inquiry into food prices if you like, but I'm telling you the facts right now and you can save yourself a lot of time reading if you take my word for it. Food in Canada is one of the biggest and best bargains you can find."

Mr. Whelan said Canadian farmers export a third of their produce.

"They are setting and breaking records in exports these days and I'm glad for them. Our farmers compete on an export market that demands the lowest prices in the world, the best quality and the best service. We have to offer those things to keep our export markets.

"As a side benefit of our farmers' abilities, Canadian consumers get top quality, top service and the best prices in he world.

"That's a bargain in anybody's language."

Mr. Whelan, an Essex County farmer, said world demand has increased prices of feed grains and protein supplements and he called for increased Canadian production of all grains.

"The markets are there, the prices are strong and at last there is a reasonable profit margin. I want them to produce to beat hell."

The minister pledged full support for current proposals to revitalize the Ontario sugar-beet industry. He said the market is right and there is a sound and solid profit to be made for everyone concerned.

WHO'S THE VILLAIN?

OTTAWA (CP) — No one can be blamed for high and rising food costs, President Charles Munro of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture said today.

"The problem is the inequaties, uncertainties and frustrations of an inflationary economy," he told about 100 delegates attending the CFA's four-day annual meeting.

Munro, an Embro, Ont., hog farmer, based his annual president's address on the recently-established Commons inquiry into food prices.

Food price inquiries have a tendency to become something of a game of "find the villain." They begin with the assumption that food prices are too high.

Other assumptions are that farmers and food industry workers are not the villains but that big supermarket corporations are at the root of the problem.

Land Tax Sales Finance Garage

Saanich Municipal Administrator W. M. Tremayne Monday night reported the tax sale land account would provide for two-thirds of the cost of a new municipal service garage which went about $74,000 over estimated cost when contract bids were in and such extras as fees and licenses added.

Dura Construction Ltd. bid low at $239,300 and the full cost was then calculated at nearly $300,000, but with some savings possible. Tremayne reported $195,000 could be taken from the tax sale lands account, leaving about $300,000 intact, and the remaining $100,000 would be in the form of short term borrowing.

Purchase of $16,200 in equipment for Cedar Hill Golf Club was approved, including a replacement for a 27-year-old tractor mower. Funds for the latter will be taken from the municipal equipment replacement reserve fund. Other items are a rotary mower, aerifier and top dressing spreader.

Council also approved continuation of the third phase of an underground irrigation system installation at $10,000 this year, leaving only a little work for its completion in 1974.

Council supported the municipal engineer in approving of an application to the B.C. water rights branch to use waters of the Colquitz basin for domestic and irrigation purposes. The licence is sought by Daniel W. and Wendy Arnason, 1470 Charlton who propose to store water near Granville and Charlton where runoff is channelled toward Colquitz River.

Approval was given Coo-Aid for the use of three acres of municipal land for raising vegetables on the same basis as in 1971 and 1972.

"They've done quite a good job there," noted Ald. Passmore after hearing a report from the youth aid group which employed applicants at $10 for a day's farm work last summer.

Architect Ben Levinson said a new developer had been found since the APC considered the application, and this was identified as G. S. Saunders Ltd., a Victoria contracting firm.

Aldermen called for a public hearing on an application by Island Pacific Realty Ltd. to rezone an area of old houses on Burnside between Eldon and Tolcross for a $1 million medium density, 98-unit apartment.

The proposed four-storey, u-shaped block would have a swimming pool in the courtyard, partial underground parking and frontage on the Victoria-Saanich boundary at Burnside.

Advisory Planning Commission advised council to reject the application and the municipal planner recommended the company plan a low-density townhouse project for the site.

"More meaningful" budget sessions are foreseen this year as a result of pre-budget planning by the administrator.

Tremayne said it is hoped three steps will see completion of the 1973 municipal budget, including council working sessions the week of April 9-13.

Hail Seeded

EDMONTON (CP) — All potential hailstorms in an area north of Calgary will be seeded by aircraft this summer, according to Gordon Sterling, interim weather modification board chairman.

Three twin-engine aircraft will be used to inject silver oidide into storm clouds. The cloud-seeding program is designed to establish a sound basis for a five-year, government-sponsored field operation in the area, said Sterling.

Sidney Resort Proposed

A proposal to build a deluxe resort hotel near the Swartz Bay ferry terminal was presented to North Saanich council Monday by spokesmen for Ferryboat Inn (Resort Ltd.).

A three-acre site on the Pat Bay Highway at Curteis Road is already zoned for inn purposes. Mrs. Tove Barlow and associate Richard Muselle asked for council's comments on the 60 units planned.

The first phase which will include a restaurant, coffee shop and some convention facilities is estimated to cost $800,000.

Muselle, a Banff resort developer, told council that few trees would be cut and that hotel architecture would blend with the environment. He said that problems of sewage disposal and water supply are still being worked out.

Ald. Nell Horth commended the company for a "refreshing appraoch." And the proposal was referred to the zoning and planning committee of North Saanich.

Design, Make Your Own Hanging Flower Basket

Brackets or hooks for hanging baskets on balconies, at entrances or on sundecks must be strong enough to hold 40 or 50 pounds weight. You cannot afford to take chances on a basket coming adrift and falling. Whatever is beneath it at the time will be smashed.

Forty pounds is the weight of one of the City of Victoria flower baskets, 12 inches wide and 10 inches deep, when filled with its soil mixture normally damp, and plants. A wood basket will be a little heavier, plastic a trifle lighter.

Many kinds of hanging containers can be found for sale, though satisfaction is greatest if you design and make your own.

The simpler the container, the more effective will be the plants. A bright green or yellow basket takes the color right out of flowers and foliage especially if they are sparse and slow in getting a start, as may happen if you are new to the gardening game.

A hoop of strong wire fashions the rim for a basket, twisting the two ends firmly together with pliers.

Close meshed wire netting or plasticized wire screening is formed into a bowl of the desired size. Attach three strands of wire at equal distances to the rim, each one ending in a wire ring for suspending from the bracket.

Wood baskets will last for a few years if emptied properly in fall, cleaned of all soil, and scrubbed thoroughly before putting them away from the weather for the winter. An open lattice or bar design lasts longer if well made, than a solid wood basket.

The best lining is undoubtedly sheets of green moss, for it is porous and alive, encouraging plant roots to anchor. In the bottom of the basket put a dish or pan to hold surplus moisture.

Today when we want hanging baskets around the patio, sundeck or apartment balcony, we have an intolerance for dripping moisture and bits of soil and moss. Plastic liners have been used but even these must have a few small holes for water escape or you'll find your plant roots drowning. However the dish in the bottom will hold a small reserve of moisture for hot days. You will soon establish a system of timing to keep up with the need for watering.

The larger the basket, the less frequently will it need watering if the entire soil content is thoroughly dampened each time. The more growth made, the more often will water be needed.

One fuchsia in a 10-inch basket full of growth, buds and opening flowers, needs a thorough slow watering each morning.

Even geraniums and lobelia in full flower should not remain dry for more than a few hours.

Baskets in shaded places are perhaps less demanding. Filled with ferns, trailing ivy and violas they are attractive from spring to fall and still be too good to discard since all the plants are permanent growers.

Whatever your basket requirements, suit them to the locations, treating them as an important part of your gardening scheme.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In the Women's World Team-of-Four Championship, held earlier this year in Miami Beach, the United States team finished third, behind Italy and South Africa. The United States was the pre-tournament favorite to win the championship, but they faltered in the last two days of play.

Today's deal, which was played in the match between Sweden and the United States, turned out profitably for the U.S. ladies when they bid a small slam on the North-South cards. Sitting North was Mrs. Jacqui Mitchell; South was Dorothy Hayden Truscott.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

♠ A 7 2
♡ A Q J 10 8
◇ J 10 6

WEST
♠ Q J 4
♡ 9 6 3
◇ K Q 8
♣ J 5 4 3

EAST
♠ 10 3
♡ 5 4 2
◇ 9 4 3 2

SOUTH
♠ K 9 8 6 5
♡ K 7
◇ A 7 5
♣ A 8 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	4 ♡	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	6 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

North's jump-shift response of three hearts denoted slam aspirations. When South raised to four hearts, Mrs. Mitchell indicated her spade suport, in the knowledge that South possessed at least five spades (North-South were not opening four-card major suits in either first or second position). Mrs. Truscott then promptly contracted for the slam in spades, being certain that North would not have jump-shifted unless she possessed at least one ace.

West got off the only lead which gave Mrs. Truscott a problem: the king of diamonds. This was captured by Souths ace, after which the ace and king of trumps were cashed, leaving West with the high queen. Now came the king and ace of hearts, and this was followed by the queen of hearts, South discarding her five of diamonds.

When West followed suit to the third heart lead, declarer was home. The jack of hearts came next, upon which South discarded her remaining losing diamond, West ruffing the trick with her queen. That was the defenders' first and last trick.

Of course, if West had possessed only two hearts, the contract would have been defeated, since West would then have been able to cash the diamond queen, in addition to a trump trick. But, on this day, Lady Luck was on the side of the United States.

DIPLOMATIC ANSWER

LONDON (CP) — Foreign office officials are not as stuffy as they may appear to be when it comes to breaking house rules.

Jennifer Maddock, a secretary at the Whitehall department, contravened regulations by writing a letter to the press complaining about mice in her office and she expected a rocket from her boss. Sure enough he summoned her to his desk — only to present her with a mousetrap, complete with a slab of cheese.

Vice-Regal Snowmobile Donated to NWT Guides

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Gov.-Gen. Michener has donated a snowmobile presented to him by Peterborough in 1969 to girl guides in the Yellowknife area of the Northwest Territories.

City clerk Syd Henry read a letter to council Monday from the Governor-General saying the machine was not called upon for extensive travel by his family. Michener said he felt the machine could be put to better use by guides in the North.

VANCOUVER — Chief Dan George reported to police that a thief stole a wallet containing more than $1,500 and the actor's coat. He said the coat was hanging on the back of a chair in a night club and that thief walked off with both the coat and the money.

LONDON — Justice Sir Robert Megarry adjusted his grey curled wig and spent an hour in his high court chambers Monday doing a jigsaw puzzle.

He was working with fragments of the last will of Gertrude Aymsley, handed to him by attorneys for her estate's executors. Mrs. Aymsley ripped the will to pieces just before she died.

Sir Robert assembled all the pieces himself, then returned to court and declared the will valid.

WASHINGTON — Senator John C. Stennis, chairman of the Senate armed services committee, underwent surgery early today one week after he was shot during a holdup. His prognosis "is considered grave," a hospital spokesman reported.

The 71-year-old Mississippi Democrat was in the operating room for 45 minutes for "exploratory surgery," said Maj. Frank Garland, spokesman at Walter Reed Army Medical Centre.

JAKARTA — U.S. Vice-President Agnew and President Suharto of Indonesia met for nearly two hours today for talks on Southeast Asian affairs.

Agnew, who arrived from Singapore, is on the sixth stage of an eight-nation tour of Southeast Asia to discuss United States policy in the wake of the Vietnam war.

Agnew is due to have more talks with Suharto before he leaves for Malaysia on Wednesday.

LONDON — Pictures of Prime Minister Trudeau are featured in several British newspapers today as part of a fund-raising campaign for the British Library of Political and Economic Science.

The library, part of the London School of Economics, is trying to raise $5,875,000 to acquire a new building and facilities. Full-page ads, with messages from prominent graduates, are displayed in a number of national newspapers.

Trudeau's message reads: "I owe a great debt of gratitude to the Library of the London School of Economics and Political Science for the way in which its exceptional store of knowledge and information has helped me from the time when I was a student."

LANCASTER, England — A monk who abandoned his vows and abducted a 15-year-old girl was saved from jail Monday — on the plea of the girl's mother.

John Hosty, 38, pleaded guilty to abduction and to unlawful intercourse. The age of consent in Britain is 16.

Judge Joseph Cautley told him: "I was going to send you to jail," adding he would be lenient after the girl's mother said she would not oppose the couple's marriage.

Judge Cautley placed Hosty on probation for two years with two conditions — that he does not see the girl until she is 18, and that he does not write to her without the mother's permission. If he breaks the conditions he will go to jail, the judge said.

LONDON — A bricklayer who lost his job on a London construction site staged a lone and chilly protest atop of a 300-foot crane today.

John Fontaine, 28, started his protest with other workmates Monday by picketing the Chelsea buildiing site where work has stopped for lack of cash.

He has not said when he intends to come down.

SAN FRANCISCO — Friends of Mrs. Shyang Jan Lee helped her celebrate Chinese New Year by leading a 400-pound cow into her restaurant.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lachman of Belvedere, Calif., who hauled the whiteface hereford into the restaurant to commemorate the year of the ox, said they planned to make the special celebration an annual event.

Mrs. Lee and her husband aren't sure about that — next year is the year of the tiger on the Chinese calendar.

Pair Perform Wednesday

Talented James Kennedy, who has received the highest commendations for his performance on the recorder, a pre-flute instrument, will be co-recitalist Wednesday with organist and harpsichordist Michael Young of Vancouver.

The program, which will be presented at the Church of Our Lord at Humboldt and Blanshard streets at 8 p.m., will include two compositions by Young.

There is no admission charge.

NORMAN MAILER, celebrating his 50th birthday, is besieged by guests Monday night at a special party in New York. The top-ranked author, who produced such works as The Naked and The Dead, was feted by the cream of New York arts and politics at a midtown Manhattan restaurant.

'New Messiah' From the Andes?

LA PAZ, Bolivia (Reuter). — The star attraction is a fair-haired youth in a white suit, striped shirt and colored high-heel shoes.

Thousands of people, invalids and their relatives, lined up all night recently for places in the Hernando Siles football stadium, scene of "Brother Julio's" latest spectacular.

A majority were stone-faced Indian peasant women in bowler hats and ponchos. But observers saw a surprisingly large number of neatly-dressed middle-class believers.

He called for "one more simple prayer and then we will see many of our sick brothers and sisters relieved of their afflictions."

He demanded "a profound faith in God, because before our bodies can be cured, the miracle must work in our hearts."

An old woman dropped her crutches and took a few tottering steps. "I can walk after five years," she cried.

An old man struggled to his feet, then half walked, half crawled a few yards across the grass towards Julio before collapsing breathless.

A little boy stepped from his wheelchair and shuffled along, immediately surrounded by photographers and television cameramen.

The people went home, and the doctors had their say.

"It is very probable," said one specialist in nervous disorders, "that there can be cures of psychosomatic illnesses — related to the nervous system.

"But it is very difficult to predict how long the relief will last. Usually it's temporary."

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to convey our gratitude and thanks to the many wonderful friends and relatives for their many kindnesses and messages of sympathy for the sudden passing of a dearly beloved husband and father Mr. Arthur Cuthbert on January 22nd in Edmonton University Hospital.
Our special thanks to the doctor and surses of the Intensive Care and nurses of the Intensive Care time, the beautiful floral arrangements and donations to the Heart Fund and Esquimalt United Church.
Special thanks to Rev. Philp Ross for his words and visits of comfort and the many organizations we both shared.—Ever grateful from a loving family, Mrs. A. Cuthbert, Jerry and Sandy.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DAVIDSON — In loving memory of a dear wife and sister Margaret:
Time speeds on, one year has passed
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
Her vacant place there's none to fill.
Dowsh here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we will meet again.
—Ever remembered by her husband Robert and sister, Norah.

HICK — Sacred to the memory of our dearly beloved father and grandfather, Nicholas, who left us February 6, 1970.
—Fondly remembered and sadly missed by his daughters, Clareta and May Ron and family.

SOMMERVILLE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ollie, who passed away Feb. 6, 1964.
Lovingly remembered and sadly missed.
—His loving wife, Esther, and sons, Bill, Jack and families.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Why Do People Get Dizzy?

In Postgraduate Medicine, Dr. Michael Paparella has an article about why people get dizzy. He says that some people who are anemic (having a low amount of hemoglobin, or red coloring matter in the blood) may at times have a faint feeling of dizziness. Vertigo means a spinning-around feeling which means that the disease is arising in the tiny balancing mechanism in the inner ears, and not in the central nervous system or any other organ system.

The doctor says that 85 per cent of the dizzy patients have their trouble in this balancing apparatus in the inner ear. Only 15 per cent have some trouble in the brain or the nerves that run from the ears to the brain.

The balancing mechanism in the inner ear consists of three little spirit levels, like those in a carpenter's level. If these are damaged in a bird, that bird is likely to fly upside-down for a while, because it no longer knows what its position is in space. Sometimes the trouble in the ear is a little tumor, an infection or an injury, like that caused by a blow on the side of the head. Much can be learned by the response of the two ears to hot or cold water, or hot or cold air, propelled against the eardrum.

Other causes for vertigo may be epilepsy or multiple sclerosis, little strokes, a tumor in the back of the ear, or trouble in the arteries that supply the lower part of the brain. An arthritis in the joints of the spinal bones in the neck may cause trouble with the artery that goes up to the base of the brain, and dizziness may then result, especially if the patient sits or lies in a certain position.

Nystagmus (a movement of the eyes from side to side) sometimes comes with dizziness. Sometimes vertigo comes when the person's head is placed in a certain position. Sometimes there is vomiting with severe dizziness, and for this there are several remedies such as are used for seasickness, for instance, Dramamine, Bonine or Tigan. These can help much. Meniere's disease is vertigo plus some failure of hearing, plus perhaps some ear noises. Some troubles in the inner ear can be due to a virus.

The best thing to do when there is any dizziness or vertigo is to go immediately to an ear specialist.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the to keep their services or location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers response more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

LETTERS HELD FOR HEARING

Letters of protest went unread when Saanich council was asked Monday night to speed up action that would permit construction of a new $300,000 wholesale warehouse at Royal Oak for Crown Zellerbach Paper Co. Ltd.

Aldermen stuck to a previous decision to leave the application for rezoning tabled until a special committee on service and commercial land use reports its findings next month.

Applicant Stanley E. Trout, a real estate representative of 1010 Blanshard, seeks rezoning of acreage at 472 Vanalman for wholesale-warehouse use, which has been pending since last summer.

Residents of the area, represented by Northridge Community Association and Royal Oak Ratepayers Association, protest the proliferation of warehouse zoning in the rural-residential area, but council agreed with Mayor Hugh Curtis in suggesting the letters not be read until the application goes to a public hearing.

Mrs. Mary Szalai, 648 Vanalman, president of Northridge Community Group, said today: "We don't feel we want a warehouse this close to our homes."

She said the land in question, lying west of Glanford, should be held by the municipality for future recreational requirements as it is close to Playland Curling Club and Douglas Golfland.

Mrs. Ruth Clay, 592 Peto Place, secretary of the Royal Oak group, said her letter was "a statement of feeling about the welfare of our area," and it objected to the proposed rezoning.

Ald. Alan Newberry said he felt the site was too close to "a good housing development" and was therefore not suitable for warehousing, and Ald. Leslie Passmore agreed. But Newberry urged the council to wait for the special report, which would be in the public interest.

"The man has waited long enough; it's time he had an answer," Ald. William Campbell said.

Special committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring said he wanted it understood that the planning department was not holding up action — "just so the planning department is not a whipping boy. This is a broad question."

He said "every effort will be made for the committee to complete its job by the end of March." No meetings had been held this year, he said, pending submission of information from the engineering department to help members arrive at a conclusion.

Dental Care Plan Too Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — A nationwide full-scale dental care insurance program would create an unbearable tax load, the president of the Canadian Dental Association said Monday.

"Philosophically, it seems to be coming," Dr. David Peters of St. John's, Nfld., said in an interview, "but I don't think there's any way in Canada now for it.

"The economic impact on the public sector would be unbearable and difficult to sustain and I'm sure we haven't got nearly the personnel, either dentists or auxiliary-care workers, to cope with it."

Dr. Peters was in Ottawa to meet Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and launch Canada's first National Dental Week.

Most dental disease—especially tooth decay—can be prevented, Dr. Peters said. However, about 95 per cent of Canadians end up needing dental work, "although only about one-third of them get it."

No Appeal By Ottawa For Nishga

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang told the Commons Monday that it is up to either the Nishga Indians or British Columbia and not Ottawa to ask the Supreme Court of Canada to review last week's decision on Nishga land claims in B.C.

In a 4-to-3 decision last Wednesday, the High Court ruled against a Nishga claim for thousands of square miles of the Nass Valley in northern B.C.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker asked the government last week to consider asking the Supreme Court to rehear the issue since the deciding vote on the claims was based on a technical point, and not on the merits of the appeal.

Lang said the government would not make such an appeal to the court since it was not directly involved.

Ex-Nazis Sentenced

FRANKFURT (AP) — A Frankfurt court sentenced six former Nazi police officers to prison terms today ranging from 2' to 15 years for aiding in the murder of about 30,000 Russian and Polish Jews during the Second World War.

Five of the men were members of a police battalion that rounded up Jews in the ghettos of Pinsk and Stolin in 1942 and escorted them to mass executions.

The other man is Adolf Petsch, a member of the security police of the Waffen SS. He was sentenced to 15 years.

The others sentenced were Walter-Heinrich Gross and Heinrich Plantius, four years; Heinz-Dieter Teltz, 3½ years; Rudolf Eckert, three years, and Johann Kuhr, 2½ years.

Senator Bucks System

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has fined Delta Airlines $2,000 for letting Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., board a jetliner without passing through an anti-hijacking screening device.

Hartke claims the government's anti-hijack program, begun nationwide in December, is an unconstitutional invasion of personal and senatorial privacy. Under the program, carry-on luggage is searched; persons are screened electronically and sometimes searched.

Hartke refused to comply when boarding a Delta plane Jan. 15 in Indianapolis, but was allowed to board anyway. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) said Delta should not have let him on the plane.

Truce Observers Confident Despite Delays, Problems

By JAMES ANDERSON
Times Correspondent

SAIGON — The pieces of Vietnam's new truce machinery started falling into place Monday, about a week behind schedule.

With fighting around the country sharply down over the New Year's holiday weekend, Monday saw three major developments:

—International peacekeeping teams, including a total of 35 Canadians, moved out to set up regional headquarters in seven province capitals around the country.

—North Vietnamese army representatives flew out to join them and establish the first Communist representation at the regional level.

—The International Commission of Control and Supervision took up its first four complaints of ceasefire violations and decided to send them, with tentative instructions, to the new regional headquarters.

The mission's link in the apparatus outlined by the agreements signed last month in Paris remained the regional representative of the Viet Cong.

Informed sources said word came late Monday that the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government was expected to get its regional representatives in place Tuesday.

American and South Vietnamese representatives on the regional truce commissions have been on the scene for several days.

The Paris peace agreements spelled out a timetable which allowed just 48 hours from Jan. 28 to get the ceasefire machinery working at the central and regional level.

But Canadian diplomats seemed generally satisfied with the progress of the past few days, which seemed to mean that the initial diplomatic stumbling blocks were being overcome.

The deputy commander of the Canadian troops on the peace-keeping force, Brig.-Gen. Donald Gagnon, also disclosed Monday that a second planeload of armed forces and external affairs department personnel would fly out next weekend to bring the Canadian contingent up to its full strength of 290.

Although the South Vietnamese government has accused the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese of more than 1,000 violations since the ceasefire was supposed to begin, the International Control Commission has officially received only four complaints — three of them apparently referring to the same incident along the Cua Viet River just below the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam.

A strip of beach between Quang Tri City and the river was captured by the South Vietnamese just around the time of the ceasefire and has since been retaken by the North Vietnamese.

Complaints about the incident have been filed by the Americans, South Vietnamese and North Vietnamese.

The four ICCS countries decided Monday to refer the complaints to their new regional headquarters in Hue, with cautious instructions to investigate if possible, according to informed sources.

Diplomatic sources indicated that the commission hoped the four fighting parties would all be represented in Hue within 24 hours, and the question of whether the ICCS could act without them would not have to be settled.

Although there have been no public disagreements among the four ICCS countries, diplomats from the two Communist members, Poland and Hungary, have indicated slightly different positions from that of the Canadians, who are reluctant to let procedural questions hold up the work of the peacekeeping teams.

Region Rejects Library Merger

Board members of the Vancouver Island Regional Library have rejected proposed amalgamation of their service with Greater Victoria Library Board under the umbrella of Capital Regional District.

At the annual meeting in Nanaimo Saturday the VIRL suggested that Greater Victoria become a member of the Vancouver Island service "instead of creating further fragmentation."

North Saanich alderman Nell Horth, chairman of the VIRL, criticized the $10,000 survey of local library facilities undertaken by an Ontario consultant, Albert Bowron. Horth told the board the study, financed by the provincial Library Development Commission, "showed a pedestrian approach to library services."

"It is our opinion that Bowron failed to realize the uniqueness of Vancouver Island as opposed to the rest of the province.

"Out of 33 municipalities and school districts, only five are not in the VIRL." These are Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt and Central Saanich.

"Wouldn't it make more sense if the five joined the VIRL?" asked Horth.

Reporting on Monday to North Saanich council Horth said VIRL circulation has increased to 1,608,974. The city and North Saanich branch is the fifth largest of 29 branches with circulation of 133,496.

Protesters, Levi Reach Stalemate

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi and the group of demonstrators occupying the government's day-care information centre in Vancouver have apparently reached a stalemate—neither side wants to move.

Levi said today he is still prepared to meet the protesters within 48 hours of their vacating the premises but will not meet them as long as they are occupying the government building.

"We just can't let anyone who wants something from the government to go in and occupy a building," Levi said. "We'll be taking this thing a day at a time. We'll wait and see what happens."

The minister added that he would have someone from his staff contact the demonstrators today.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the demonstrators says the group won't meet Levi unless he goes to Vancouver.

Marj Sigurgeirson said the protesters have refused to accept Levi's offer to fly a group of them to Victoria for a meeting.

The group of about 30 women have occupied the day-care information centre since last Thursday when it opened. They are seeking establishment of 24-hour day-care service, which Levi describes as "not a high priority."

"From their point of view they have a legitimate protest," Levi said. But he added that the government cannot tolerate sit-in demonstrations as a matter of course.

Saanich Scores On Safety

Saanich is one of 50 Canadian communities of more than 40,000 population that scored 100 per cent fatality-free during Safe Driving Week 1972.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said today the municipality will receive a certificate of commendation signed by Governor-General Roland Michener for its good record Dec. 1-7, when 53 persons died as a result of auto accidents across Canada.

P. J. Farmer, executive director of the Canada Safety Council in Ottawa, wrote to Saanich, which is one of 62 Canadian communities of 40,000 population or larger.

Marching Mothers Half Way

Victoria's Marching Mothers collected more than half their $50,000 objective in Monday's one-night blitz of door-to-door canvassing.

March co-ordinator Sheila Manifold said today that $27,000 had already been turned in with only half the districts reporting.

"It looks as though we won't have any trouble reaching our objective," Mrs. Manifold said.

The march, in aid of British Columbia's disabled, is sponsored by the Victoria Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C.

Not all the marchers were mothers. Twenty student nurses from Royal Jubilee Hospital, 25 boys from the Oak Bay and Signal Hill Demolay chapters and 40 Kinsmen helped with the canvas.

"It's not as safe canvassing as it used to be," Mrs. Manifold said. "We try to put boys or men in areas where we think there might be trouble."

BRIDE PUSHED OFF CLIFF

EDINBURGH (AP) — A 21-year-old West German was found guilty Monday of pushing his bride off a cliff to collect about $968,000 in life insurance.

The court sentenced Ernst Dumoulin to life in prison.

Dumoulin and his fiancee, Helga, 18, had eloped to Scotland. She fell 300 feet from the Salisbury Cliffs Friday, Oct. 13, their wedding day.

Dumoulin testified that his wife tried to push him off the cliff but fell over herself as they were struggling.

Officials Fired

CAIRO (AP) — Eleven officials from the state party and provincial trade union were dismissed Monday in a purge of so-called political deviates. The announcement was made by a disciplinary body of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only authorized political party. Sixty-four professional persons were dismissed from their jobs and the party Saturday.

Duncan Grade School Goes Metric

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

DUNCAN — Students in Alexander Elementary here are learning the metric system now so that they will already be "thinking" metrically when the department of education makes the new system of measuring compulsory, says principal Tom Good.

Good said the transition from imperial measure to metric measure for the 525 kindergarten to seventh-year students in the school began in January.

"Now the changeover is complete," he said.

Good explained that the school has introduced a limited program.

"Our eventual objective will be to have the children think metrically", he said. "Our emphasis will be upon the primary grades and this will include kindergarten."

Good said that usually metrication is introduced at the sixth year level and "then it is a case of exposured to metrication, rather than thinking metrically."

The federal government's White Paper on Metric Conversion in Canada brought down in Janury, 1970, changed everything, Good said.

duncan cowichan

Duncan Bureau
Phone: 746-6181

"It appears that 1981 is the likely target date for Canada to convert to the metric system", he said. "It is not a hard and fast goal because it will depend on whether the United States decides to convert as well. The matter is now before Congress".

Good pointed out that if the U.S. decides not to convert, Canada may hold off because the neighboring countries are the single greatest trading markets for each other.

In the department of education's curriculum guide for mathematics it states that it is anticipating having all Grade 1 and 2 pupils using the metric system as the standard measurement in September, 1973.

Good believes his school is the first one in the Cowichan Valley or even B.C. to have all grades use the metric system.

Before his school's changeover Good said he checked with all departments of education across Canada for guidance.

'It is my understanding that in Ontario the whole elementary school system is encouraged to go metric. They have already printed an unofficial paper on it," he said.

Good said the general impression he got from the majority of the departments is that they are waiting for leadership in the conversion. "It seems like the individual schools will be providing leadership."

Good said that the kindergarten children have the advantage over other students because they will be learning the metric system as a mother tongue while other students are already thinking in the English system, as are most adults.

"The English system will be taught as a secondary system because we will have to live with it for a long time", he added.

Currently in kindergarten, children in Alexander school are weighing themselves in kilograms and measuring their height in centimetres.

Knight Chosen Chairman

Dr. Knight, of 4190 Glendenning, is a resource management consultant and a strong supporter of community involvement in education.

He is serving his second term as school board trustee, is chairman of the school board's business and legal affairs committee, and served as board chairman during the month of December.

Knight was elected at the opening meeting of the college council which saw the changeover from a 12 to nine-member body, with five members from the school board and four appointed by the government.

The members are: Lavina Greenwood, Walter Donald, Philip Ney, John Duffus and Knight, from the board; and Dr. Charles Gregory, Mrs. Geertje Tromp, Mrs. J. A. Claxton and Miss Elizabeth Moore, appointed by the provincial government.

Top Talent for Drug Seminar

DUNCAN — A one-day seminar here Feb. 17 will offer a high calibre of panel members in an attempt to attract a large number of participants.

The seminar, sponsored by the Cowichan Valley Drug Information Association, will be held at Cowichan Senior Secondary from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Under the motto — Drug Abuse, your Business and Mine — the drug problem will be discussed by: Joe Lien, superintendent of the Narcotics Addiction Foundation, Vancouver; Dr. Maureen Benwick, co-ordinator of the Salt Spring Island Community Centre; Norm Levi, provincial minister of rehabilitation; Rober Strachan, minister of highways; Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace; Judge Stan Wardill, Nanaimo; and Joan Jakes, family life co-ordinator for Nanaimo school district.

UIC ACCOUNT ALMOST EMPTY

OTTAWA (CP) — The unemployment insurance account trickled nearer empty Monday while Liberals and Conservatives haggled in the Commons over a bill that would again fill it with needed funds.

The government has said the account will run dry Wednesday unless Parliament passes a bill to remove the $800-million ceiling on the amount the government is allowed to lend the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC).

The government bailed out the fund in August — after dissolution of the last House — by issuing governor-general's warrants. The UIC is again running out of money and the only way to save the situation, the government says, is to lift the ceiling.

The Conservatives attempted Monday to push through three amendments that would have limited loans to $900 million.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, and later Deputy Speaker Robert McCleave, swept the proposed amendments aside with lengthy decisions.

The House finally settled into a debate Monday evening on a motion to have the bill read a third time and passed.

B.C. Jobless Near 10%

Times News Services

OTTAWA—Unemployment in British Columbia jumped to 95,000 in January — almost 10 per cent of the total work force and 16,000 more than a year ago — Statistics Canada reported today.

The national unemployment total last month was 688,000 — 7.7 per cent of the country's work force — up from 665,000 a year ago. January's percentage of unemployed was the highest since March of 1961.

The size of the labor force remained high and the number of persons working also showed a drop that was less than the usual size between December and its pre-Christmas activity and January, the figures show.

The labor force — those listed as eligible for work — was 8,881,000, compared with 8,929,000 in December and 8,582,000 in January of last year.

There were 8,193,000 persons working compared with 8,345,000 in December and 7,917,000 in January of 1972.

The participation rate, the percentage of the civilian population listed as members of the work force, also continued to run high.

British Columbia, at 9.9 per cent, was second only to the Atlantic region and Quebec in jobless totals.

Despite the fact January's unemployment level was the highest in almost 12 years, Ottawa considered today's report good news.

January is always a cruel month for job-seekers in Canada and Statistics Canada says that taking historical seasonal fluctuations into account, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 6.2 per cent in January, from 6.7 per cent a month earlier.

B.C. Premier Dave Barrett said this morning he wants to review figures in his office, and may comment on the jobless picture in this province later.

As far as the long-term trend is concerned even a drop of .2 per cent in the seasonally-adjusted figure is considered significant, so the decline of .5 per cent in January was good news for the government.

Nevertheless, in absolute terms the figure of 688,000 persons out of work was close to the all-time high set in February, 1961, and unless there is some dramatic turn-around this month that 1961 record likely will be broken.

All regions of the country showed an increase in the number of unemployed between the two months, but only the Atlantic provinces took a turn for the worse when seasonal fluctuations were taken into account.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate rose from 9.4 per cent to 9.5 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, while dropping from 8.6 per cent to 8.4 per cent in Quebec, from 5.0 to 4.2 per cent in Ontario, from 5.1 to 4.7 per cent on the Prairies, and from 8.4 per cent to 8.0 per cent in British Columbia.

The actual number of unemployed increased from 67,000 to 87,000 in the Atlantic provinces, from 206,000 to 247,000 in Quebec, from 153,000 to 170,000 in Ontario, and from 79,000 to 89,000 in the Prairies.

Bonn Props Dollar

Times News Service

BONN — West Germany's Central Bank bought a record $1.5 billion today in a desperate emergency attempt to bolster the U.S. dollar being driven downward in money marts throughout Europe.

Chancellor Willy Brandt's government rejected American advice to meet the attack by letting the German mark rise in price.

Instead, the government instructed the Central Bank to defend the dollar at all costs to halt the panicky run.

At the end of today's trading by dealers on the crowded floor of the Frankfurt exchange, the dollar closed at a rate of 3.1515 marks. This was 2.21 per cent off the official median rate, and several notches below Monday's closing.

In other European financial capitals, the dollar continued to lose ground. In London and Zurich, a massive transfer from currency investment into gold pushed up the free-market gold price to within a few cents of its all-time high.

The big London bullion dealers pegged gold in the morning at $68.90 an ounce — $1.30 higher than the Monday rate.

This is nearly twice the official price of gold before the U.S. abandoned dollar convertibility into gold in August, 1971.

Even at today's figure, there were plenty of buyers around, dealers reported, and some deals were being made in London at $69.35 an ounc.

Board Appeals For Parent Help

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today failure to reach a settlement in the 25-day old Greater Victoria school maintenance workers strike means the board will have to look ahead and "endeavor to extend school openings," with the help of parents.

The strike by 268 members of local 382, Canadian Union of Public Employees, is deadlocked today after the union rejected a mediation officer's recommendations, which was accepted by the school board. (See story page 17)

"It's up to parents. If they are interested in helping clean schools and keeping them up to standard then we will endeavor to continue education as normally as possible," Bunn said.

The board had previously expressed a desire to stay neutral on the question of parents coming in to clean schools.

Asked if this was a reversal and the board now intended to organize clean-up crews, Bunn said:

'SELF-GENERATING'

"This must be a self-generating thing. But the board will make every effort to make possible parental action."

Board officials met today with Education Minister Eileen Dailly to ask for an order-in-council which would give them a legal right to open schools for two hours a day.

Schools have been operating in this way during the strike but only with the verbal support of the department of education, not legal permission.

Bunn said the board will ask for the approval with the condition that school hours may be extended "by the superintendent provided heating and cleanliness is maintained."

MODERATELY CLEAN

"We see this as being on a school to school basis," Bunn said.

"If the plant is functioning satisfactorily, if they have automatic heating and it's moderately clean, the superintendent will tell principals the school can stay open."

Bunn agreed that the board was seeking to make its position legal in order that

PARALYSED BOY AWARDED $4M

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than $4 million has been awarded a paralysed and mute 13-year-old boy, Kelly Niles of San Rafael, in what his lawyer calls the largest personal injury verdict ever granted one person in United States history.

Defendants were Mt. Zion Hospital in San Francisco, pediatrician Dr. David Haskin, the City of San Rafael and San Rafael school district.

Niles suffered a fractured skull and internal bleeding in a fight during a school baseball game June 26, 1970. Witnesses reported Haskin examined the youngster at Mt. Zion, then sent him home. When his condition worsened his father returned the boy to the hospital and he underwent surgery.

Doctors testified that the boy would have made a full recovery had he been treated immediately.

Strike Called In Ulster

BELFAST (Reuter) — Protestants have called a one-day strike in Northern Ireland over the detention without trial of two men arrested after a grenade attack on a Catholic workmen's bus last week.

Spokesman said after a meeting of several Protestant paramilitary organizations Monday night that thousands of supporters will stay off work Wednesday and their children will not go to school.

"The next 48 hours will show who runs the province," a source close to the Protestant militants said.

The two men in custody, arrested after a Catholic workman was killed in the grenade attack last week, are thought to be the first Protestants detained without trial on suspicion of terrorist activities.

A British solider was slightly injured Monday night by a bomb thrown at a patrol from the top of an apartment building in the Catholic Lower Falls area of Belfast.

Other bombs badly damaged a real estate office in the city centre and an automobile works in Antrim, west of Belfast.

Beatings Halt Talk

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of five elevator companies broke off talks Monday with the International Union of Elevator Constructors after three supervisors were beaten in Hamilton.

An industry spokesman said James Stephen, 33, of West Hill, Ont., was beaten by three men Monday while working in the elevator machine room at a Hamilton apartment project.

Stephen, employed by Armor Elevator Canada Ltd., was treated in hospital and released.

Two members of the supervisory staff of Otis Elevator Ltd. were beaten later by seven persons at a parking lot in the city's east section.

The spokesman identified the two men as John Nagy and Harry Johnston. Nagy, 32, was treated in hospital and released. Johnston did not go to hospital.

PoW Release 'About Saturday'

Times News Services

The first groups of U.S. prisoners of war to be freed in both North and South Vietnam will be handed over about Saturday, Michel Gauvin, chairman of the international ceasefire commission, said today.

"There are no definite dates, but I understand the American prisoners will probably be released around the 10th of February — some of them, not all, from Hanoi," Gauvin told reporters following a meeting of the ICCS.

Four United States Navy minesweepers were ordered today to begin clearing an anchorage 35 miles off Haiphong harbor to serve as a base of operations for later sweeping of mines from North Vietnamese ports.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party opposition groups are insisting the government's resolution approving Canada's role in supervising the Vietnam peace be brought back into the Commons for a vote.

The Liberal minority government, embarrassed by the two amendments introduced by the Conservatives and NDP, is ducking the request.

NDP Leader David Lewis said Monday in an interview he wants the government to bring the resolution back into the House this week for a vote.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield is also insisting the government resolution be brought before the House again so that the Commons can vote on it. G. W. Baldwin, Conservative House Leader, asked Government House Leader Allan MacEachen in the House Monday when it would be submitted to the House for a vote.

MacEachen sidestepped the question. He said the government would consider bringing it before the House if the Commons finished the other business scheduled to be dealt with by the MPs.

Oak Bay Treasure Hunted

They had to get official approval to do it, but once that was accomplished two school boys could get down to business.

Old bottles is their idea of treasure.

"We haven't been collectors for very long, but we both got interested in the weird kinds of bottles we kept on finding in out of the way places," Rod, 15, explained.

"We figured one of the best

NO TRUCE OBSERVED

HAI LANG, Vietnam (AP) — A team of the international peacekeeping force headed for their first day in the field today, but an artillery duel prevented them from getting into Quang Tri City. (See also Page 31.)

Eight officers of the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS) stopped five miles short of the devastated capital of South Vietnam's northernmost province. They were on a one-day trip north from their new regional headquarters at Hue.

North Vietnamese 130-millimetre shells raised towering clouds of black smoke near South Vietnamese airborne units west of Highway One and the government troops answered with their 105 millimetre guns. No shells have fallen in Quang Tri City itself for several days.

"We are only on a reconnaissance mission and we are not here to observe artillery fire," Col. William MacLeod of Canada told disappointed South Vietnamese officers who had prepared a welcome for the truce observers in Quang Tri.

"But don't worry," he added. "We'll be back."

MacLeod said he was under orders not to subject his team to any danger.

"What do we have to prove anyway?" MacLeod asked.

"I have fought enough wars."

Mortgage Crackdown Call

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The B.C. government was urged Monday to crack down hard and soon on the "outright crooks" among the province's mortgage brokers.

Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) told the legislature hundreds of poor people are being "gypped" by brokers who charge excessively high interest rates and bonuses, disguise the true cost of borrowing and in some cases use misleading advertising.

"This is one huge rip-off by people who are on the verge of being crooks," he said.

Brousson called on the government to enforce provisions of the Mortgage Brokers Act passed two years ago, proclaim the section of the act requiring full disclosure of the true cost of borrowing before an agreement is binding, and generally amend and update the legislation to make it "tougher."

He gave details of specific mortgages arranged by several companies, including Westview Properties Ltd., Modern Finance Ltd., General Securities Ltd., Trinity Properties Ltd. and Link Developments Ltd.

In one instance the bonus or commission earned by the company was as high as 50 per cent of the actual loan, he said.

In another, the interest rate on loan repayments was so high — 24 per cent — that at the end of the five-year loan period the borrower still owed as much as he did at the outset.

Brousson said many people are apparently "given the impression" that the bonus shown on the agreement is the amount of interest on the loan, whereas that sum is added to the principal and interest charged on the whole amount.

He described the experience of one couple with a $25,000 home who arranged a $6,000 second mortgage on their return from Hong Kong a year ago.

Legal fees amounted to $200 and on the total of $6,200 the company charged a bonus of $1,700 or 29 per cent of the proceeds. Interest charged was set at 17 per cent with payments of $118 per month.

"Buried" down in the fine print of the agreement was a clause stipulating the entire sum still outstanding would become payable at the end of five years, Brousson said.

This meant that if the borrower kept up his time payments in five years he would have paid up about $7,080 but would still owe $7,300 of the $7,900 to which he had committed himself.

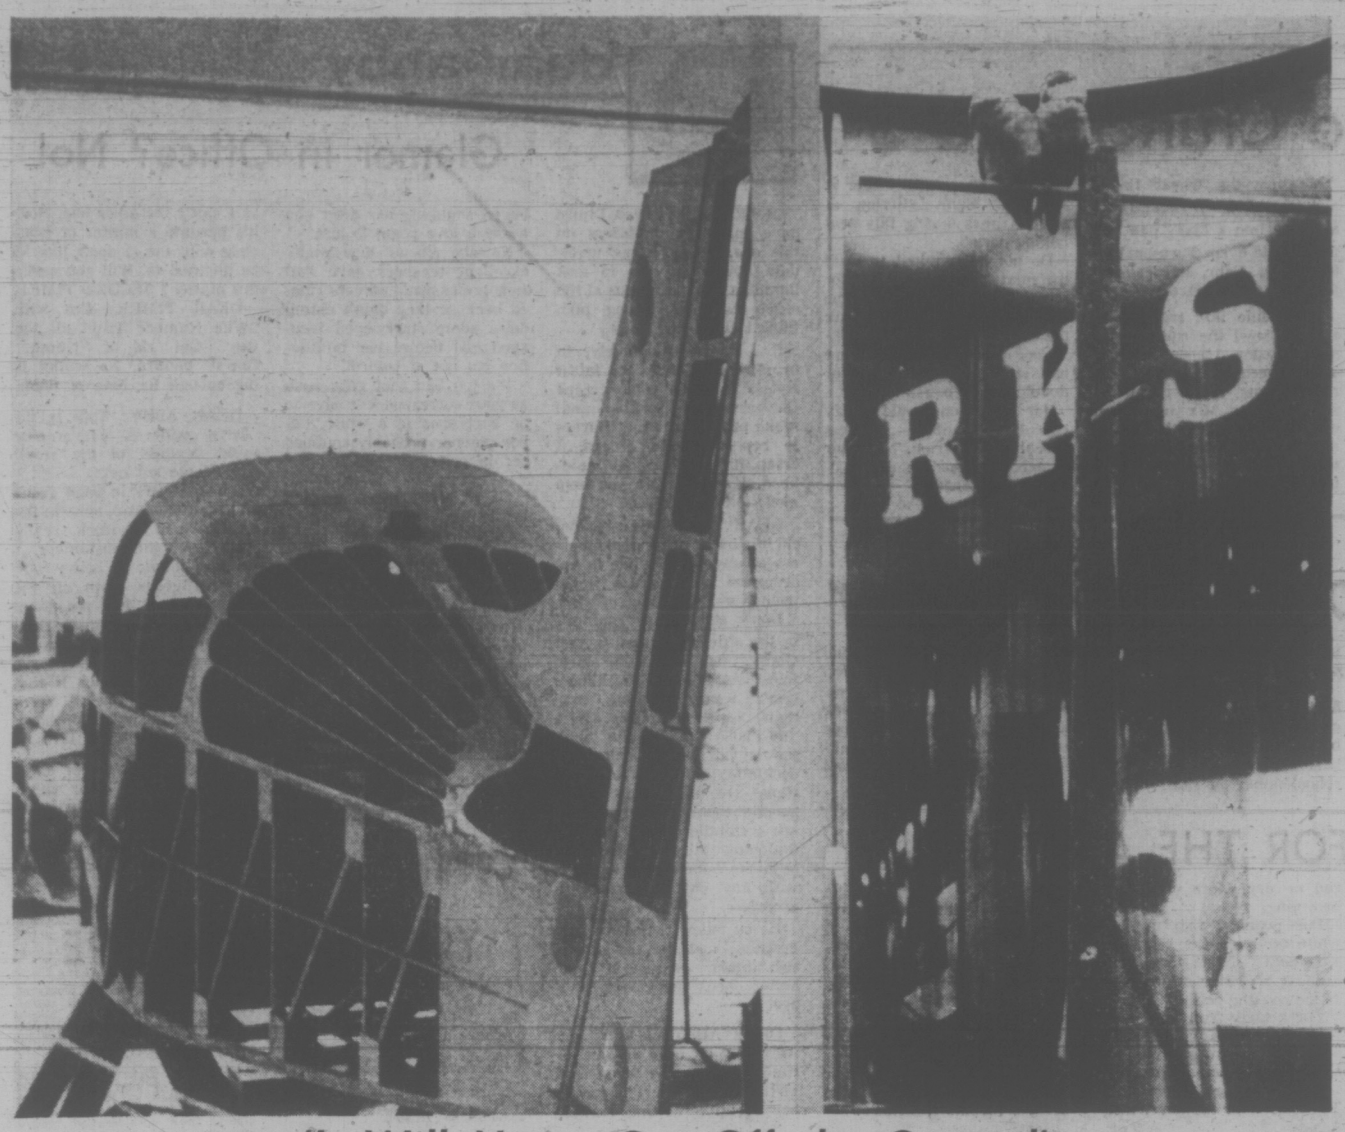
SECOND SECTION



'It Will Never Get Off the Ground'

There's skepticism in the reaction of the two master flyers (top right) as they seem to sneer at sections of a Cavalier SA 102-5. It's part of the aviation display at Hillside Mall until Saturday which is co-ordinated by the Canadian Pilots and Owners Association and designed to promote aviation. The display includes a Stits Playmate SA-11A, a Benson Gyro Glider and booths manned by members of various flying clubs in the area. (Bill Halkett photo.)

King Summons Board, Union To His Office

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Labor Minister Bill King today called both sides in the 25-day Greater Victoria School District strike to his office for talks.

He and Education Minister Eileen Dailly met first with school board chairman Peter Bunn, school district superintendent A. J. Longmore and personnel officer Dave Coton for just over one hour.

King and Dailly were not available for comment.

Reached later, Bunn said in response to questions that "there are things in the works that will be initiated by King" but that all statements had to come from the minister.

A school board meeting was to be held tonight.

At midday, King and Dailly were scheduled to meet representatives of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, on strike against the school district.

Union leaders were also to meet among themselves this afternoon to review where they go now following rejection at a three-hour membership meeting Monday night of recommendations for settlement of the contract dispute by mediation officer Clark Gilmour. School board trustees voted acceptance at a half-hour meeting.

Union spokesman Dick Proctor said the bargaining committee and executive were holding an emergency meeting "to consider what happened and to determine what we do, where we go from here."

The mediator's recommendations stumbled over the new classification of janitor-laborer. Both sides had agreed to five pages of changes for a new contract and Gilmour made recommendations running to three pages.

'Extremely Unfortunate'

School board chairman Peter Bunn said the union's rejection of the recommendations is "extremely unfortunate. They are totally disrupting the education of 31,000 students. There are clauses there which the board is not happy with. It's a lot of money — $200,000 for this year, $220,000 next year."

Bunn said the recommendations should have been treated as a package and "not nitpicked."

Proctor said union members voted down the new janitor-laborer classification "so they voted down the whole package."

Proctor said the school board was insistent on the new classification and had proposed that work outside the school be permitted for up to three hours a day but not more than 12 hours a week at any school without extra assistance to clean the inside, and a 5 cents an hour differential.

The union counter-offered that the janitor-laborer could either work four hours inside, four hours outside, or six months inside, six months outside.

The mediator, he said, recommended the 5 cents differential if a job description was accepted.

"The membership said they do not want janitor-laborer under any conditions. The mediator recommended substantially what the board has proposed."

Bunn said there is "an extremely complicated background" to the janitor-laborer issue and referred questions to Coton. He wasn't available this morning.

On another main issue in the strike, Proctor said the classification of matron, in effect a day-time janitor, would be redescribed as day cleaner and the work would be along lines agreed to by both sides in a job description.

Don't Have to Scrub Floors

"There are differences — they are not responsible for security of the building, they do not have to scrub floors or burn waste," he said.

The mediator recommended a day cleaner rate of $3.16 an hour, or 44 cents an hour less than janitors, who work night and graveyard shifts, prior to the general wage increase.

Proctor said there was a "spoken understanding" that any matron — they are all women — who wanted to apply for janitor jobs could do so.

"The idea was that either sex could do both jobs," he said. When questioned if there was any wording proposed to state this, he said he couldn't recall it.

The matrons used to be janitors until two years ago when a new contract was signed setting up the matron position as a day-time one. The union contended they do the same work as janitors, but were being paid $2.85 and $3.11 an hour compared with the janitors' $3.60. The school board said they did different work.

Bunn said the day cleaner job would be a lighter one than janitor, and there would be a wage differential. But he said the job could be done by a man or a woman, with hours restricted to 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Men and women would also be hired equally into the all-male janitor classification, if women could carry out the work.

Proctor also outlined these other areas either recommended or not recommended by the mediator:

—Double time for overtime after two hours. It was after four hours;

—No janitors to be required to clean exterior windows above the first floor. This would end the practise of having janitors use 40-foot poles to wash high outside windows;

—No split shifts;

—Eighteen cents per mile for use of personal automobile. It was 15 cents.

—No change in vacations or sick leave;

—Temporary employees to receive base rate after three months instead of after one year;

—No recommendation on the union request for consecutive graveyard shifts;

—Wages: Across-the-board increases of 33 cents an hour Jan. 1, 1973, 8 cents July 1, 1973, 33 cents Jan. 1, 1974, 8 cents July 1, 1974. Plus 10 cents an hour for tradesmen Jan. 1, 1973, and 10 cents Jan. 1, 1974.

The position of the two parties immediately prior to Gilmour's recommendation was: Union — 72 cents an hour in a one-year agreement; School board — 33 cents an hour in each year of a two-year agreement.

On a percentage basis, the union had been seeking 20 per cent in one year, the board had offered just over 9 per cent per year, the mediator recommended 11 per cent per year, but in two stages per year.

Reader's Tip Leads To Arrests

Leonard Larson, 42, serving time for robbery, and housebreaker Wilfred John Humphreys, 36, were arrested Monday night as police from Central Saanich and Saanich burst into their room at the Brentwood Motel, 7215 West Saanich.

Police had followed up a telephone tip from someone who had read Larson and Humphrey's description in Monday's Times. Police arrived at the motel and arrested the two men without a struggle.

The escapers were both remanded without plea or election to Feb. 13.

$13,000 Damage In Fires

Fires in two Greater Victoria homes today caused a total of $13,000 damage but there were no injuries to occupants.

At 8:12 a.m. sparks from the back of a television set resulted in a $7,000 fire at 516 Tait, Saanich Fire Chief Harold Gains said.

Mrs. Myrna K. Rand, owner of the home, was at work when the fire broke out. Her children, Gerald, 6, and Deborah, 9, were watching television when "the young lad noticed sparks coming out the back of the set. The drapes were instantly ignited," said Gains.

A family friend, Mrs. Donna Boklage, 876 Attrie, called shortly after the fire began, instructed the children to leave the house and telephoned the fire department.

Firemen battled the blaze for two hours, but the walls in the kitchen and living room, lined with veneer panelling, were gone before firemen arrived, said Gains.

In Victoria, a short circuit in an electrical panel caused an estimated $6,000 damage to the basement and porch of a home at 569 Hillside.

David and Marjett Pabla, tenants in the house, owned by Ross Lemire, 631 Hillside, were forced from their second-storey suite by smoke at 1:38 a.m., said Deputy Chief Carl Coates. There were no other tenants in the house.

Store Charged

Charges of misleading advertising, under the Consumer Protection Act, were laid against a local furniture store in provincial court today.

Traders Home Furnishings Ltd. and its president Victor Orest Kowalchuk, are charged with placing an ad Nov. 26 for furniture without giving the number of instalments in their time-paying plan for the goods.

Taxpayer Group Mystery Solved

Frampton, Mace Involved

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

The riddle of the anonymous James Bay ratepayers' association was solved Monday night when Ald. Percy Frampton, a James Bay property owner, and highrise developer J. A. Mace appeared as chairman and feature speaker at the association's inaugural meeting.

About 100 owners of James Bay properties gathered at Edelweiss Hall on Niagara in response to an unsigned circular letter which protested a recent move by the city administration to reduce the density of apartment zoning contained in a 1967 James Bay overall plan.

In two hours of lively debate, a strong faction more or less led by Mace argued that reduction of apartment zoning in three proposed areas of James Bay (where the planners say there is durable housing) would ruin profits of homeowners wishing to sell out.

Two members of this faction were homeowners, one was a highrise developer, another a real estate salesman, and one, Framton, an alderman.

Another faction argued that James Bay under the 1967 plan is basically headed for the fate of the West End peninsula of Vancouver, which is densely built up with highrise apartment and hotel towers. This faction was composed exclusively of homeowners.

The first development in the Christmas-festooned hall was the revelation of how the ratepayer group got started.

Bob White, 325 Irving, said he received phone calls from neighbors after the Daily Colonist published a letter of his Jan. 14 protesting the rezoning proposals.

White, who said he had built many apartment buildings himself, said Ald. Frampton and developer Mace were among the callers. A circular letter (unsigned) and Monday's meeting were agreed only.

White, who spoke first, and identified himself only after a request from the audience, said the city's proposed rezoning would make the single-family housing areas slums because of the expense of fixing up old houses.

"No matter what the mayor or the other dreamers say, we must wake up before the public hearing," White said, in reference to a public hearing which must be called before rezonings are approved.

Ald. Frampton took the role of chairman of the meeting, commenting that it was something new for him to be chairman of a ratepayers' association. He said he wanted the group to be an outlet for the opinions of taxpayers in James Bay.

Next was David Bowman, 356 Simcoe, who said he owned several pieces of property in James Bay and had lived there for 12 years.

"I am one of the faceless ones who is supposed to have started this group," he said.

"I've never built a building in Victoria. I have not speculated, and I've never sold a building I built," he said.

Bowman said the proposed three areas of single family housing were the "keynote" of why he was at the meeting and had helped form the group.

"I asked the tenants of my buildings whether they had been consulted about the new plans and in no case did they say yes," Bowman said.

"As an owner and taxpayer I have not been consulted," he said.

A voice asked if he was consulted in 1967 when original plans were approved. Bowman said he did not think he was consulted then, either.

Then into the glare of the television lights stepped Mace who said he had put nearly $20 million worth of development into James Bay.

"James Bay is the oldest area with the oldest houses, and it should be developed first," he said.

He read a newspaper report of his appearance before city council in 1965 calling for a plan for James Bay with parks and other amenities.

Mace said James Bay could never become "another West End" because planned densities were only half those of the West End. He said areas planned to be zoned back to single family and duplex were ill-suited to duplexes because most of the sites were too small to conform to duplex use.

Vic Smith, who said he was a realtor in James Bay, quoted the case of Miss V. E. Mesher, 16 Paddon, descendant of a pioneer, who had been offered $32,000 for her house when it was zoned for apartments, and had now lost the offer. Miss Mesher later confirmed the account.

Then Kay Lines, 27 South Turner, said she knew of a woman property owner who was offered $14,500 for her house by a developer who had surrounded the property with an apartment building and told her she would be hounded out by hippies and alcoholics.

Lorne De Girolamo, 140 Medana, said he saw three factions in James Bay property owners: those who wanted the best return on an investment; another group which he estimated at two-thirds of the owners he said were holding for investment, did not live in the area, and did not "give a damn"; then he said there were those who wanted to live in the area and enjoy it.

"People who want to live here don't want to be forced out by monstrosities or traffic — all I want out of it is the price of my house. It's these rip-off artists who distort prices who stop people living here. Homes are for living in!"

Bill McKechnie, 613 Avalon, said property owners should consider the historical value of James Bay and restore their houses, making it into a prestige area of attraction to tourists and high-paying purchasers alike.

Blayney Scott, 306 Dallas, called for a properly balanced community.

"Why can't you think of a place for people to live?" he asked. "Why do you think of property as a place to peddle?"

"I don't see why property values should go down after some down-zoning, Scott told a jeering audience. "People will realize it's a livable area; it should have some value in itself."

Signatures were taken for the formation of a registered ratepayers' association 1973.

At the outset of the meeting, Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the city zoning committee, and Kathleen Ransom, member of the advisory planning commission, were barred from the meeting on the grounds that they were not ratepayers in James Bay. Ald. Frampton later advised Mrs. Ransom she could enter, but she declined.

Weekly Lectures Set At City's Highrise U.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Ivory tower meets highrise.

That, in summary, is the University of Victoria's latest plan for sharing its educational resources with the community.

The university and the Provincial Museum are jointly going to begin holding courses in highrise apartment buildings, strictly for highrise dwellers.

First course, a series of four weekly lectures on British Columbia Indians, will begin Feb. 14 for residents of the Lord and Lady Simcoe apartments on Simcoe St. in James Bay.

The free lectures will be given by Dr. David Wyatt of the university's anthropology department and J. C. Haggerty, assistant curator of archeology at the Provincial Museum, using Indian artifacts and illustrated material. They will be held in the lounge area of one of the buildings.

A second series of four lectures will follow, starting March 14, in another highrise.

Highrises were picked for the experiment because they have such a high concentration of people, said Dr. Lawrence Devlin, director of continuing education at UVic. The two Simcoes have about 800 people in them, he said.

"We were also concerned about some of the negative aspects characteristic of highrise living," Devlin said.

Attending a course right in their building might break down some of the barriers between highrise dwellers.

Devlin has no idea whether two or 200 people will turn out for the evening classes. He's hoping for about 40.

"If this kind of experiment goes well we'll be thinking of broadening it out," he said.

Eventually the highrise dwellers themselves could get together, decide what kind of course they'd like to have, and then ask the university to set it up, he said.

NEW CHAIRMAN of the Greater Victoria Public Library's board is Ald. Art Mebs, of Esquimalt. Elected vice-chairman at today's meeting was Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell.

English Department Head Picked

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

A 31-year-old University of Rochester professor has been chosen by a University of Victoria selection committee to head the university's 50-member English department.

Ottawa native David Jeffrey needs only UVic presidential and Board of Governor approval before taking over the department that boasts more than 2,000 students enrolled in English courses.

But there is a hitch. Jeffrey, who taught at UVic in 1968, has been offered the academic vice presidency at Rochester, and while he wants to return here, he is anxiously awaiting official word.

Contacted in Rochester, New York today, Mrs. Jeffrey said, "We're waiting for an official letter.

"Right now we're sitting on the fencepost. Our final decision will be made early next week."

Jeffrey, who will replace Professor Roy Leslie if approved, won out over 70 other applicants through a complicated selection procedure.

The committee, composed of four members from the English department and three deans, brought three finalists to UVic in order to meet with administration and English department members.

Then, English department members wrote anonymous assessments of each candidate.

"There was an overwhelming show of strong letters in favor of Jeffrey," assistant professor Patrick Grant said today.

With a virtually unanimous English department consensus, the recommendation then went to the Deans' Advisory Committee. This committee advises Arts and Science Dean Jean Paul Vinay, who was also a member of the selection committee.

According to Grant, the three deans on the selection committee, including Vinay, were impressed with the unanimity displayed by the English department.

"In fact the selection has been made," Grant said, "this committee, we hope, will expedite things and get the administration moving."

JOB CREATING SCHEMES HELP 700 INCITY AREA

Federal job creation schemes have produced more than 700 winter jobs in the Capital Region.

Cost to the government in wages for the new jobs totals about $1,287,000.

Three programs are involved in Canada Manpower's make-work efforts: Local Initiatives Programs in the public and private sectors and Training-On-the-Job schemes in local businesses.

Victoria's municipal and school board L.I.P. projects total 21, creating 216 jobs, while private projects total 44 and employ 366 workers.

Most L.I.P. projects began in December or early January and will terminate May 31.

Manpower assistant manager F. E. Schroeder said about 12 more L.I.P. proposals have been submitted to Manpower's regional office and may also receive federal grants.

Training-on-the-Job, which aims to create new jobs rather than just supply temporary employment, has provided 119 positions so far, generating $240,000 in wages, $137,000 of which is to be paid by the federal government.

Under this program, employers hire and train workers in addition to their regular labor force and Manpower pays 75 per cent of their salaries during the first half of their training and 50 per cent in the latter half.

Training programs may run six to 40 weeks and Manpower will not pay more than $118 a week.

Schroeder said local businessmen submitted 381 proposals for job training and more than 200 of those are still being processed.

Many of these, he said, may be accepted but processing will take up to another month.

Schroeder explained that Manpower plans these new jobs to become permanent but cannot force employers to hire trainees after the Manpower-subsidized program is terminated.

Two other job-creation programs, which are on-going rather than one-shot efforts, are on-the-job-training where there are indentifiable skill shortages and training for the disadvantaged.

These are not "high impact" programs, Schroeder said, and he has no definite figures on the number of jobs they have created so far.

Fight Drained Man. NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Manitoba's New Democratic Party government is not likely ever again to put through legislation as controversial as its government auto insurance bill because the experience was so draining, Manitoba MLA Cy Gonick said Monday.

"The Manitoba NDP started on the offensive. Then the auto insurance thing came in and drained our energy and sapped us. We became defensive about the things we'd done," said Gonick.

He told a University of British Columbia audience insurance companies and opposition parties mounted such a concerned campaign against the government that the MLAs felt competely alone.

"We took such a beating on that one I swear it'll never happen again," he said. "We were 28 guys and it looked like we were against the whole world.

Gonick, a member of the Manitoba Waffle movement before its demise, said later he does not expect to run again.

He said he had little hope the NDP can realize traditional socialist goals.

"Raising taxes is a futile way of redistributing income because when you raise the taxes for the rich man or the company they will simpy push the taxes onto others through the products they sell. If you lower the tax for a poor person to give them a little more money the rich people will charge them more in prices, credit rates and so on."

'It's About Time Food Prices Up'

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says he has little sympathy with persons who complain about rising food prices.

"Prices have finally turned the corner for our farmers and it's about time," he told a closed meeting of executives of southwestern Ontario Liberal riding associations during the weekend.

"Certainly I have sympathy for the consumers of food and fixed incomes," he said, "but I don't think we can or should expect farmers of Canada to carry the welfare load for our entire society by accepting unreasonably low prices for their products."

"You can wait for the report of the inquiry into food prices if you like, but I'm telling you the facts right now and you can save yourself a lot of time reading if you take my word for it. Food in Canada is one of the biggest and best bargains you can find."

Mr. Whelan said Canadian farmers export a third of their produce.

"They are setting and breaking records in exports these days and I'm glad for them. Our farmers compete on an export market that demands the lowest prices in the world, the best quality and the best service. We have to offer those things to keep our export markets.

"As a side benefit of our farmers' abilities, Canadian consumers get top qualiy, top service and the best prices in he world.

"That's a bargain in anybody's language."

Mr. Whelan, an Essex County farmer, said world demand has increased prices of feed grains and protein supplements and he called for increased Canadian production of all grains.

"The markets are there, the prices are strong and at last there is a reasonable profit margin. I want them to produce to beat hell."

The minister pledged full support for current proposals to revitalize the Ontario sugar-beet industry. He said the market is right and there is a sound and solid profit to be made for everyone concerned.

WHO'S THE VILLAIN?

OTTAWA (CP) — No one can be blamed for high and rising food costs, President Charles Munro of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture said today.

"The problem is the inequaties, uncertainties and frustrations of an inflationary economy," he told about 100 delegates attending the CFA's four-day annual meeting.

Munro, an Embro, Ont., hog farmer, based his annual president's address on the recently-established Commons inquiry into food prices.

Food price inquiries have a tendency to become something of a game of "find the villain." They begin with the assumption that food prices are too high.

Other assumptions are that farmers and food industry workers are not the villains but that big supermarket corporations are at the root of the problem.

Land Tax Sales Finance Garage

Saanich Municipal Administrator W. M. Tremayne Monday night reported the tax sale land account would provide for two-thirds of the cost of a new municipal service garage which went about $74,000 over estimated cost when contract bids were in and such extras as fees and licenses added.

Dura Construction Ltd. bid low at $239,300 and the full cost was then calculated at nearly $300,000, but with some savings possible. Tremayne reported $195,000 could be taken from the tax sale lands account, leaving about $300,000 intact, and the remaining $100,000 would be in the form of short term borrowing.

Purchase of $16,200 in equipment for Cedar Hill Golf Club was approved, ineluding a replacement for a 7-year-old tractor mower. Funds for the latter will be taken from the municipal equipment replacement reserve fund. Other items are a rotary mower, aerifier and top dressing spreader.

Council also approved continuation of the third phase of an underground irrigation system installation at $10,000 this year, leaving only a little work for its completion in 1974.

Council supported the municipal engineer in approving of an application to the B.C. water rights branch to use waters of the Colquitz basin for domestic and irrigation purposes. The licence is sought by Daniel W. and Wendy Arnason, 1470 Charlton who propose to store water near Granville and Charlton where runoff is channelled toward Colquitz River.

Approval was given Coo-Aid for the use of three acres of municipal land for raising vegetables on the same basis as in 1971 and 1972.

"They've done quite a good job there," noted Ald. Passmore after hearing a report from the youth aid group which employed applicants at $10 for a day's farm work last summer.

Architect Ben Levinson said a new developer had been found since the APC considered the application, and this was identified as G. S. Saunders Ltd., a Victoria contracting firm.

Aldermen called for a public hearing on an application by Island Pacific Realty Ltd. to rezone an area of old houses on Burnside between Eldon and Tolcross for a $1 million medium density, 98-unit apartment.

The proposed four-storey, u-shaped block would have a swimming pool in the courtyard, partial underground parking and frontage on the Victoria-Saanich boundary at Burnside.

Advisory Planning Commission advised council to reject the application and the municipal planner recommended the company plan a low-density townhouse project for the site.

"More meaningful" budget sessions are foreseen this year as a result of pre-budget planning by the administrator.

Tremayne said it is hoped three steps will see completion of the 1973 municipal budget, including council working sessions the week of April 9-13.

Hail Seeded

EDMONTON (CP) — All potential hailstorms in an area north of Calgary will be seeded by aircraft this summer, according to Gordon Sterling, interim weather modification board chairman.

Three twin-engine aircraft will be used to inject silver oidide into storm clouds. The cloud-seeding program is designed to establish a sound basis for a five-year, government-sponsored field operation in the area, said Sterling.

Sidney Resort Proposed

A proposal to build a deluxe resort hotel near the Swartz Bay ferry terminal was presented to North Saanich council Monday by spokesmen for Ferryboat Inn (Resort Ltd.).

A three-acre site on the Pat Bay Highway at Curteis Road is already zoned for inn purposes. Mrs. Tove Barlow and associate Richard Muselle asked for council's comments on the 60 units planned.

The first phase which will include a restaurant, coffee shop and some convention facilities is estimated to cost $800,000.

Muselle, a Banff resort developer, told council that few trees would be cut and that hotel architecture would blend with the environment. He said that problems of sewage disposal and water supply are still being worked out.

Ald. Nell Horth commended the company for a "refreshing appraoch." And the proposal was referred to the zoning and planning committee of North Saanich.

Council Delays Rec Plebiscite

Oak Bay council won't go ahead with a money bylaw for a recreation complex — or go to voters with a referendum — until it hears whether its application for a $767,000 federal loan has been approved.

The vote against going ahead was unanimous.

Ald. Douglas McLelland was first to speak against immediate action. He said he had talked to provincial officials who recommended that "the municipality not go too far down the bylaw trail until this (loan) application has been approved."

He said cutoff date for approval of winter works loans was mid-February.

"The decision could be coming before the end of the month or shortly afterward," he said.

He said if council received approval for the loan it could then "get down to the nuts and bolts."

Ald. John Goult supported McLelland when he said a letter should be sent today giving the council's position on the matter.

Goult said council was not in a position to judge whether a referendum should be held at this time.

Under the special loan program, council could go ahead with a money bylaw if it was a unanimous vote. Plans for the $1.6 million complex financing included the loan, plus $500,000 in federal winter works funds and $333,000 from the provincial government under its fund that provides one-third the cost of sports facilities costing up to $1 million.

Mayor Frances Elford said, "We did vote unanimously two weeks ago to apply for the loan."

Ald. Brian Smith said it was essential that the taxpayers be given all pertinent information, including the costs of construction, the proposed design of the complex and what sort of operating deficits could be expected.

Smith said there was no justification for not going to referendum to avoid the possibility of it being turned down.

"My sole object," he said, "is that we go forward and present all the facts."

He said it was decided not to go to referendum after this was done council would "avoid it (the referendum) with honor — not expediency."

Council agreed, on Smith's suggestion, that an information brochure be drawn up and circulated to every taxpayer.

A. B. Arnison, 942 Newport, reminded the council that they had been voted in by a referendum and said one should be held on the proposed centre.

He said Oak Bay could better spend federal and provincial grants on sewage treatment plants and "cleaning up our beaches."

Harry Gregson, 2160 Beach, said municipally-owned facilities invariably lost money and that Oak Bay should consider allowing a commercial facility to be built.

Council agreed that, once the information has been given taxpayers, a public meeting might be held at which all concerned residents could voice their opinions.

parents could not insist their children attend schools on a normal basis without the superintendent's permission.

If parents force their children to stay at a dirty or unheated school "they will be in an illegal position, not the board," Bunn explained.

Announcements on Wednesday's school openings will be made later today. After that the situation at schools may change daily.

FLOOD OF CALLS

The board's community relations officer Bill Stavdal said calls were "flooding" into his office this morning from parents wanting to clean schools.

He said the board was putting these people in touch with each other so they could make their own clean-up arrangements.

Principals from the district's 54 schools are meeting the adminstration this afternoon to discuss future school operations.

Cam Thompson, spokesman for a parents group which protested school closures in front of the legislature last week, says he's not sure what further protest action they will take.

'DESPERATE'

"We're desperate but I don't know what kind of effective action can be taken," Thompson said.

He said parent clean-up crews would have to be organized on an individual basis since many parents are union members themselves and would not want to jeopardize their union position by strike-breaking.

Meanwhile, at Rockheights elementary school, where protesting parents insisted their children stay in school all day Monday, principal Don McKinnon reports 36 students returned for afternoon classes.

All elementary schools have been open from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. for over a week.

McKinnon said the students who stayed the whole day were not given instruction but were supervised in their studies by their teachers.

"We can't go on with the curriculum when only a handful of students are there," he said.

Ottawa Gets Fire Prevention Grand Award

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa has been given a North American fire prevention grand award for 1972, the Boston-based National Fire Protection Association announced today.

Second in Canada behind Ottawa in the annual competition was Calgary. Entrants are judged on community efforts to reduce fires and educate the public in fire prevention practices.

THIS SENATOR WANTS BETTER PUBLIC IMAGE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate needs "a very good publicity committee with a top-notch man to look after it," a Quebec senator told the Senate Monday.

Senator Louis-Philippe Beaubien (PC—Quebec) said the Senate's public image is being ruined by reporters who do not recognize the true talents and abilities of the Senate.

At the time he was complaining about reaction to the Senate passing in three days a 1971 government bill, C-259, to reform income tax procedures.

First suggested in a 1969 white paper, the bill was introduced in June, 1971, and passed in December, 1971. Along the way the subject had been dissected in the Commons and the Senate and in committee by representations from business and private individuals.

Many amendments proposed by the Senate were ignored by the Commons, Senator Beaubien said.

The Senate, he said, has done its best work during times of a minority government "because then the Senate has pushed around a little bit."

A recent article in the Wall Street Journal, he said, "made us look like ninnies. It said that we looked at Bill C-259 and passed it in three days."

"Let us have a publicity committee that will do us a little good. We can do it, and of course, we have the power."

. . . MORTGAGE CRACKDOWN

meet the payments, he had interceded on their behalf and as a result the company had agreed to cut $500 off its bonus of $1,200.

In view of the response by the firm, Brousson said, he would not identify it. But he did go on to name several other companies and mention some mortgages in which they had been involved.

One was General Securities Ltd., owned by Burrard Mortgages and Investments, which had charged a $2,000 bonus — or 50 per cent of total proceeds — on a $4,000 first mortgage against a $15,000 home.

Another involved Trinity Properties Ltd., which Brousson said is part of a "pretty big group" owned by a man called Mike Poppell, who has "quite an empire" of finance companies, used car lots and mortgage companies.

For a loan of $2,150 (including $150 legal fees) Trinity required a $1,000 bonus, or 47 per cent.

Brousson mentioned another case where the actual loan was $3,500, the bonus charged $1,000 and the monthly payments over five years (at 24 per cent interest) were $90.

"In five years he would have paid out $5,400 and still owe the original $4,500," he said. "The interest rate exactly matches what he is paying out each month."

In this case, he said, the company involved was Dupont Acceptance Corporation which had since been sold to a man named Walter Link and was now known as Link Developments.

Brousson charged that many of the companies which advertise mortgage facilities are under common ownership, but have different names and telephone numbers so that "people are confused."

He also claimed that many advertisements offering private funds for financing are, in fact, offered by individuals who work for mortgage companies by day and indulge in this activity as a form of "moonlighting."

This, he said, is in direct contravention of the Mortgage Brokers Act.

Brousson said many of the unethical practices now prevalent were brought to the attention of former attorney-general Leslie Peterson, who did nothing to correct the situation.

Urging a thorough study of the problem, he suggested that amendments to the legislation could be brought in this fall, if there is insufficient time in the current session.

Heroin Thrown From Moving Car

A 21-year-old man, arrested last September after throwing 21 caps of heroin from a car while being pursued by RCMP undercover agents, today was remanded in custody on a reduced charge of possession of heroin.

Joseph Bruce Paul Podfigorny pleaded guilty to the possession charge. He had originally been charged Sept. 11 with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

FOR OWN USE

Crown Prosecutor Bob Johnstone today withdrew this charge, for want of sufficient evidence. The accused had since claimed the narcotic was for his own use. On Sept. 10, RCMP drug squad agents had a house in the 1200 block Balmoral under surveillance. Agents trailed Podfigorny as he left the house around 4:45 in the afternoon.

Near Victoria General Hospital, the accused threw a pink balloon, later found to contain 21 caps of heroin, searched at Victoria police headquarters, another cap was found in the man's trouser pocket and a charge of heroin trafficking was laid.

Judge William Ostler agreed to have the man remanded in custody to Feb. 20 for presentence report because of the quantity of the from his car window. When narcotic.

places to dig was by the creek, because there used to be an old dump here. But we didn't think you needed to get the mayor's permission to dig, so we just started digging. That was a few weeks ago.

Their first attempt at excavation attracted a neighbor's attention and before the youths knew it they were being told by police that digging on the property was outlawed.

"So we went to the mayor," said Rod, as if it were the natural thing for them to do.

Mayor Frances Elford turned advocate for the two boys at Monday night's council meeting. She said the boys had told her there was "grand treasure to be found in old dumps."

With expectations like that, the boys were given permission providing they put every piece of turf back in place.

And their instints about dumps have proven successful.

Arrest Adds to Drug Scandal

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A key figure in the cracking of the famous "French Connection" drug case of more than a decade ago was charged Monday with selling heroin with a street value of more than $200,000.

Federal agents identified him as Francis Waters, 43, the Federal Bureau of Narcotics agent in charge of breaking up the international "French Connection" drug ring in the early 1960s.

Waters's arrest adds new scandal to the "French Connection" case, coming only two months after disclosures that most of the heroin seized in the disbandment of the gang had been stolen from the New York City police vaults where it had been held.

Since the bureau was incorporated into a large federal organization in 1969, five agents have been arrested and charged with drug dealings and 40 have resigned after being investigated.

Waters, now the manager of an East Side New York bar, was charged with selling about a pound of heroin in 1968, a year after he quit the bureau.

Federal agents said the heroin Waters allegedly sold had a street value of $200,000. They said tests were being conducted to determine whether the heroin was part of the 80 pounds, worth $18 million, stolen from the "French Connection" cache.

The "French Connection" gained international fame through a best-selling book and a motion picture which gave most of the credit for the breakup of the gang to a former New York City police officer, Eddie Egan.

Waters, unhappy with the role assigned to him in the film, sued the producers last year for $1 million. He claimed the film showed him to be an incompetent who gets himself killed at the picture's end. The suit was dismissed by the New York State Supreme Court last June.

Hemorrhoids?
New Anusol Plus will quickly ease the pain, soothe the itch, and cool the burning.

That's the promise we make for new Anusol Plus.

Because the pain of hemorrhoids can be intense, we designed new Anusol Plus to give you really fast relief.

To do this, it contains a topical anaesthetic.

Almost as soon as you apply it, you'll notice an easing of that throbbing, burning sensation.

And, with it, the pain and itching will have all but disappeared.

And while Anusol Plus works quickly, the relief that it gives will last for hours.

Of course, easing the pain is just part of what Anusol's brand new formula does to help your hemorrhoids.

It contains a gentle decongestant to help reduce swelling and inflammation, plus two soothing antiseptic agents to curb the spread of infection.

To help shield tender tissues from irritation, it contains a rich, protective emollient.

One other thing. So the medication itself won't add to your suffering, new Anusol Plus comes in a silky-smooth cream.

This means it goes on easily. Even on spots that are tender and inflamed.

New Anusol Plus is now at your pharmacy, in cream form or suppository.

It'll give you fast relief from the pain, the itch, and the burning of hemorrhoids.

That's a promise.

the weather

As pressures continue building southwards skies are mostly clear across B.C. except for some cloudiness which still lingers over extreme southern portions of the province. A few widely scattered snowflurries have been reported in the vicinity of the large lakes in the Okanagan and Kootenay regions. Clearing is expected over southeastern B.C. by tonight. On Wednesday skies will be mostly sunny right across the province. However strong winds will still continue blowing over some of the mainland inlets.

UIC ACCOUNT ALMOST EMPTY

OTTAWA (CP) — The unemployment insurance account trickled nearer empty Monday while Liberals and Conservatives haggled in the Commons over a bill that would again fill it with needed funds.

The government has said the account will run dry Wednesday unless Parliament passes a bill to remove the $800-million ceiling on the amount the government is allowed to lend the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC).

The government bailed out the fund in August — after dissolution of the last House — by issuing governor-general's warrants. The UIC is again running out of money and the only way to save the situation, the government says, is to lift the ceiling.

The Conservatives attempted Monday to push through three amendments that would have limited loans to $900 million.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, and later Deputy Speaker Robert McCleave, swept the proposed amendments aside with lengthy decisions.

The House finally settled into a debate Monday evening on a motion to have the bill read a third time and passed.

B.C. Jobless Near 10%

Times News Services

OTTAWA—Unemployment in British Columbia jumped to 95,000 in January — almost 10 per cent of the total work force and 16,000 more than a year ago — Statistics Canada reported today.

The national unemployment total last month was 688,000 — 7.7 per cent of the country's work force — up from 665,000 a year ago. January's percentage of unemployed was the highest since March of 1961.

The size of the labor force remained high and the number of persons working also showed a drop that was less than the usual size between December and its pre-Christmas activity and January, the figures show.

The labor force — those listed as eligible for work — was 8,881,000, compared with 8,929,000 in December and 8,582,000 in January of last year.

There were 8,193,000 persons working compared with 8,345,000 in December and 7,917,000 in January of 1972.

The participation rate, the percentage of the civilian population listed as members of the work force, also continued to run high.

British Columbia, at 9.9 per cent, was second only to the Atlantic region and Quebec is jobless totals.

Despite the fact January's unemployment level was the highest in almost 12 years, Ottawa considered today's report good news.

January is always a cruel month for job-seekers in Canada and Statistics Canada says that taking historical seasonal fluctuations into account, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 6.2 per cent in January, from 6.7 per cent a month earlier.

B.C. Premier Dave Barrett said this morning he wants to review figures in his office, and may comment on the jobless picture in this province later.

As far as the long-term trend is concerned even a drop of .2 per cent in the seasonally-adjusted figure is considered significant, so the decline of .5 per cent in January was good news for the government.

Nevertheless, in absolute terms the figure of 688,000 persons out of work was close to the all-time high set in February, 1961, and unless there is some dramatic turn-around this month that 1961 record likely will be broken.

All regions of the country showed an increase in the number of unemployed between the two months, but only the Atlantic provinces took a turn for the worse when seasonal fluctuations were taken into account.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate rose from 9.4 per cent to 9.5 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, while dropping from 8.6 per cent to 8.4 per cent in Quebec, from 5.0 to 4.2 per cent in Ontario, from 5.1 to 4.7 per cent on the Prairies, and from 8.4 per cent to 8.0 per cent in British Columbia.

The actual number of unemployed increased from 67,000 to 87,000 in the Atlantic provinces, from 206,000 to 247,000 in Quebec, from 153,000 to 170,000 in Ontario, and from 79,000 to 89,000 in the Prairies.

Bonn Props Dollar

Times News Service

BONN — West Germany's central bank bought a record $1.5 billion today in a desperate emergency attempt to bolster the U.S. dollar being driven downward in money marts throughout Europe.

Chancellor Willy Brandt's government rejected American advice to meet the attack by letting the German mark rise in price.

Instead, the government instructed the central bank to defend the dollar at all costs to halt the panicky run.

At the end of today's trading by dealers on the crowded floor of the Frankfurt exchange, the dollar closed at a rate of 3.1515 marks. This was 2.21 per cent off the official median rate, and several notches below Monday's closing.

In other European financial capitals, the dollar continued to lose ground. In London and Zurich, a massive transfer from currency investment into gold pushed up the free-market gold price to within a few cents of its all-time high.

The big London bullion dealers pegged gold in the morning at $68.90 an ounce — $1.30 higher than the Monday rate.

This is nearly twice the official price of gold before the U.S. abandoned dollar convertibility into gold in August, 1971.

Even at today's figure, there were plenty of buyers around, dealers reported, and some deals were being made in London at $69.35 an ounce.

Board Appeals For Parent Help

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today failure to reach a settlement in the 25-day-old Greater Victoria school maintenance workers strike means the board will have to look ahead and "endeavor to extend school openings," with the help of parents.

The strike by 268 members of local 382, Canadian Union of Public Employees, is deadlocked today after the union rejected a mediation officer's recommendations, which was accepted by the school board. (See story page 17)

"It's up to parents. If they are interested in helping clean schools and keeping them up to standard then we will endeavor to continue education as normally as possible," Bunn said.

The board had previously expressed a desire to stay neutral on the question of parents coming in to clean schools.

Asked if this was a reversal and the board now intended to organize clean-up crews, Bunn said:

'SELF-GENERATING'

"This must be a self-generating thing. But the board will make every effort to make possible parental action."

Board officials met today with Education Minister Eileen Dailly to ask for an order-in-council which would give them a legal right to open schools for two hours a day.

Schools have been operating in this way during the strike but only with the verbal support of the department of education, not legal permission.

Bunn said the board will ask for the approval with the condition that school hours may be extended "by the superintendent provided heating and cleanliness is maintained."

MODERATELY CLEAN

"We see this as being on a school to school basis," Bunn said.

"If the plant is functioning satisfactorily, if they have automatic heating and it's moderately clean, the superintendent will tell principals the school can stay open."

Bunn agreed that the board was seeking to make its position legal in order that

PARALYSED BOY AWARDED $4M

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than $4 million has been awarded a paralysed and mute 13-year-old boy, Kelly Niles of San Rafael, in what his lawyer calls the largest personal injury verdict ever granted one person in United States history.

Defendants were Mt. Zion Hospital in San Francisco, pediatrician Dr. David Haskin, the City of San Rafael and San Rafael school district.

Niles suffered a fractured skull and internal bleeding in a fight during a school baseball game June 26, 1970. Witnesses reported Haskin examined the youngster at Mt. Zion, then sent him home. When his condition worsened his father returned the boy to the hospital and he underwent surgery.

Doctors testified that the boy would have made a full recovery had he been treated immediately.

Strike Called In Ulster

BELFAST (Reuter) — Protestants have called a one-day strike in Northern Ireland over the detention without trial of two men arrested after a grenade attack on a Catholic workmen's bus last week.

Spokesman said after a meeting of several Protestant paramilitary organizations Monday night that thousands of supporters will stay off work Wednesday and their children will not go to school.

"The next 48 hours will show who runs the province," a source close to the Protestant militants said.

The two men in custody, arrested after a Catholic workman was killed in the grenade attack last week, are thought to be the first Protestants detained without trial on suspicion of terrorist activities.

A British solider was slightly injured Monday night by a bomb thrown at a patrol from the top of an apartment building in the Catholic Lower Falls area of Belfast.

Other bombs badly damaged a real estate office in the city centre and an automobile works in Antrim, west of Belfast.

'Beatings Halt Talk

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of five elevator companies broke off talks Monday with the International Union of Elevator Constructors after three supervisors were beaten in Hamilton.

An industry spokesman said James Stephen, 33, of West Hill, Ont., was beaten by three men Monday while working in the elevator machine room at a Hamilton apartment project.

Stephen, employed by Armor Elevator Canada Ltd., was treated in hospital and released.

Two members of the supervisory staff of Otis Elevator Ltd. were beaten later by seven persons at a parking lot in the city's east section.

The spokesman identified the two men as John Nagy and Harry Johnston. Nagy, 32, was treated in hospital and released. Johnston did not go to hospital.

PoW Release 'About Saturday'

Times News Services

The first groups of U.S. prisoners of war to be freed in both North and South Vietnam will be handed over about Saturday, Michel Gauvin, chairman of the International Commission of Control and Supervision said today.

"There are no definite dates, but I understand the American prisoners will probably be released around the 10th of February — some of them, not all, from Hanoi," Gauvin told reporters following a meeting of the ICCS.

Four United States Navy minesweepers were ordered today to begin clearing an anchorage 35 miles off Haiphong harbor to serve as a base of operations for later sweeping of mines from North Vietnamese ports.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Progressive Conservative and NDP groups are insisting the government's resolution approving Canada's role in supervising the Vietnam peace be brought back into the Commons for a vote.

NDP Leader David Lewis said Monday in an interview he wants the government to bring the resolution back into the House this week for a vote.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield is also insisting the government resolution be brought before the House again so that the Commons can vote on it. G. W. Baldwin, Conservative House Leader, asked Government House Leader Allan MacEachen in the House Monday when it would be submitted to the House for a vote.

MacEachen sidestepped the question. He said the government would consider bringing it before the House if the Commons finished the other business scheduled to be dealt with by the MPs.

Oak Bay Treasure Hunted

They had to get official approval to do it, but once that was accomplished two school boys could get down to business.

Old bottles is their idea of treasure.

"We haven't been collectors for very long, but we both got interested in the weird kinds of bottles we kept on finding in out of the way places," Rod, 15, explained.

"We figured one of the best

NO TRUCE OBSERVED

HAI LANG, Vietnam (AP) — A team of the international peacekeeping force headed for their first day in the field today, but an artillery duel prevented them from getting into Quang Tri City. (See also Page 31.)

Eight officers of the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS) stopped five miles short of the devastated capital of South Vietnam's northernmost province. They were on a one-day trip north from their new regional headquarters at Hue.

North Vietnamese 130-millimetre shells raised towering clouds of black smoke near South Vietnamese airborne units west of Highway One and the government troops answered with their 105 millimetre guns. No shells have fallen in Quang Tri City itself for several days.

"We are only on a reconnaissance mission and we are not here to observe artillery fire," Col. William MacLeod of Canada told disappointed South Vietnamese officers who had prepared a welcome for the truce observers in Quang Tri.

"But don't worry," he added. "We'll be back."

MacLeod said he was under orders not to subject his team to any danger.

"What do we have to prove anyway?" MacLeod asked.

Mortgage Crackdown Call

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The B.C. government was urged Monday to crack down hard and soon on the "outright crooks" among the province's mortgage brokers.

Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) told the legislature hundreds of poor people are being "gypped" by brokers who charge excessively high interest rates and bonuses, disguise the true cost of borrowing and in some cases use misleading advertising.

"This is one huge rip-off by people who are on the verge of being crooks," he said.

Brousson called on the government to enforce provisions of the Mortgage Brokers Act passed two years ago, proclaim the section of the act requiring full disclosure of the true cost of borrowing before an agreement is binding, and generally amend and update the legislation to make it "tougher."

He gave details of specific mortgages arranged by several companies, including Westview Properties Ltd., Modern Finance Ltd., General Securities Ltd., Trinity Properties Ltd. and Link Developments Ltd.

In one instance the bonus or commission earned by the company was as high as 50 per cent of the actual loan, he said.

In another, the interest rate on loan repayments was so high — 24 per cent — that at the end of the five-year loan period the borrower still owed as much as he did at the outset.

Brousson said many people are apparently "given the impression" that the bonus shown on the agreement is the amount of interest on the loan, whereas that sum is added to the principal and interest charged on the whole amount.

He described the experience of one couple with a $25,000 home who arranged a $6,000 second mortgage on their return from Hong Kong a year ago.

Legal fees amounted to $200 and on the total of $6,200 the company charged a bonus of $1,700 or 29 per cent of the proceeds. Interest charged was set at 17 per cent with payments of $118 per month.

"Buried" down in the fine print of the agreement was a clause stipulating the entire sum still outstanding would become payable at the end of five years, Brousson said.

This meant that if the borrower kept up his time payments in five years he would have paid up about $7,080 but would still owe $7,300 of the $7,900 to which he had committed himself.

Brousson said as it was obvious that sooner or later the people concerned would lose their home through failure to
